ABSTRACT

The Phase II Architectural Survey of Arlington County was conducted between October 1996 and September 1997 by the architectural and historic preservation firm of Tracerics under the direction of the Virginia Department of Historic Resources (VDHR) and the Arlington County Department of Community Planning, Housing and Development. The project encompassed the reconnaissance survey of 1015 properties representing the areas and periods of significance of Arlington County within the defined boundaries established in the Phase I Architectural Survey. The Phase I on-site reconnaissance survey, which consisted of 750 properties, centered on the residential neighborhoods of southern Arlington, specifically Neighborhood Service Areas F, G, and H, as well as selected Target Areas. The substantial number of properties within this part of southern Arlington County that had reached the fifty-year-age limit set by the federal and state governments reduced the on-site survey to include the Target Areas -- Nauck, Columbia Heights West, and Arna Valley -- and 95% of Neighborhood Service Area H with a total of 761 resources documented. Phase II continued the reconnaissance survey process within the specified Neighborhood Service Areas F, G and H. The on-site survey anticipated the identification, documentation and assessment of 1000 additional properties.

As stated in the historic context, completed during the Phase I Architectural Survey in 1995-1996, the period of significance for Arlington County began in 1674 with the patenting of the Howson Tract. The development and growth of the county was directly related to Washington, DC and the federal presence as early as 1791, when the land was surveyed as part of the Nation's Capital. Returned to the Commonwealth of Virginia by the U.S. Congress in 1846, Arlington officially separated from the City of Alexandria in 1870. Adopting the name Arlington County in 1920, the community began its greatest phase of development, growing from a population of 16,000 in 1920 to 170,936 in 1990. Today, almost all of the land in Arlington has been developed, and consists of extensive single-family residential neighborhoods, and areas where commercial, office and multiple-family dwellings predominate.

The study resulted in the completion of Virginia Department of Historic Resources Field Forms for 1015 properties at the reconnaissance-level. Each resource was architecturally defined, physically assessed, photographed with black and white film, and documented for its contribution to the historic context of Arlington County. The impressive number of historic properties within the targeted survey area forced methodology based largely on historic maps and county needs. Tracerics used a 1936 Sanborn Fire Insurance Map and the 1943 Franklin Survey Map to properly identify historic resources to be included in the survey. Area H was completely surveyed to include all resources erected prior to 1943. Area G, the major focus of the Phase II Survey, included Arlington View, Columbia Heights, Foxcroft Heights, Central Arlington, Arlington Heights, Alcova Heights, Nauck and New Arlington-Douglas Park. All of these neighborhood communities were comprehensively surveyed to the 1936 date of construction as documented by historic maps. With the completion of Area G, the focus of the survey was centered on Neighborhood Service Area F. Within this area, the historic properties in the community of Glen Carlyn were completely recorded to the 1936 date of construction. The northwest section of Barcroft, above Pershing Drive, was surveyed to 1936, as well.

Following the reconnaissance survey, twenty properties were recommended for further investigation at the intensive-level. The neighborhoods of Arlington Ridge, Central Arlington, and Glen Carlyn were researched and documented as potential historic districts, which is defined by the National Register of Historic Places as possessing a significant concentration, linkage, or continuity of sites, buildings, or structures united historically or aesthetically by plan or physical development. Supplementary to the above recommendations, it is proposed that additional on-site field survey work be conducted to comprehensively document all properties erected prior to 1947 within Areas F, G and H. Additionally, the survey field work should be continued within Neighborhood Service Areas that have not previously been documented.

INTRODUCTION

Project Purpose and Goals

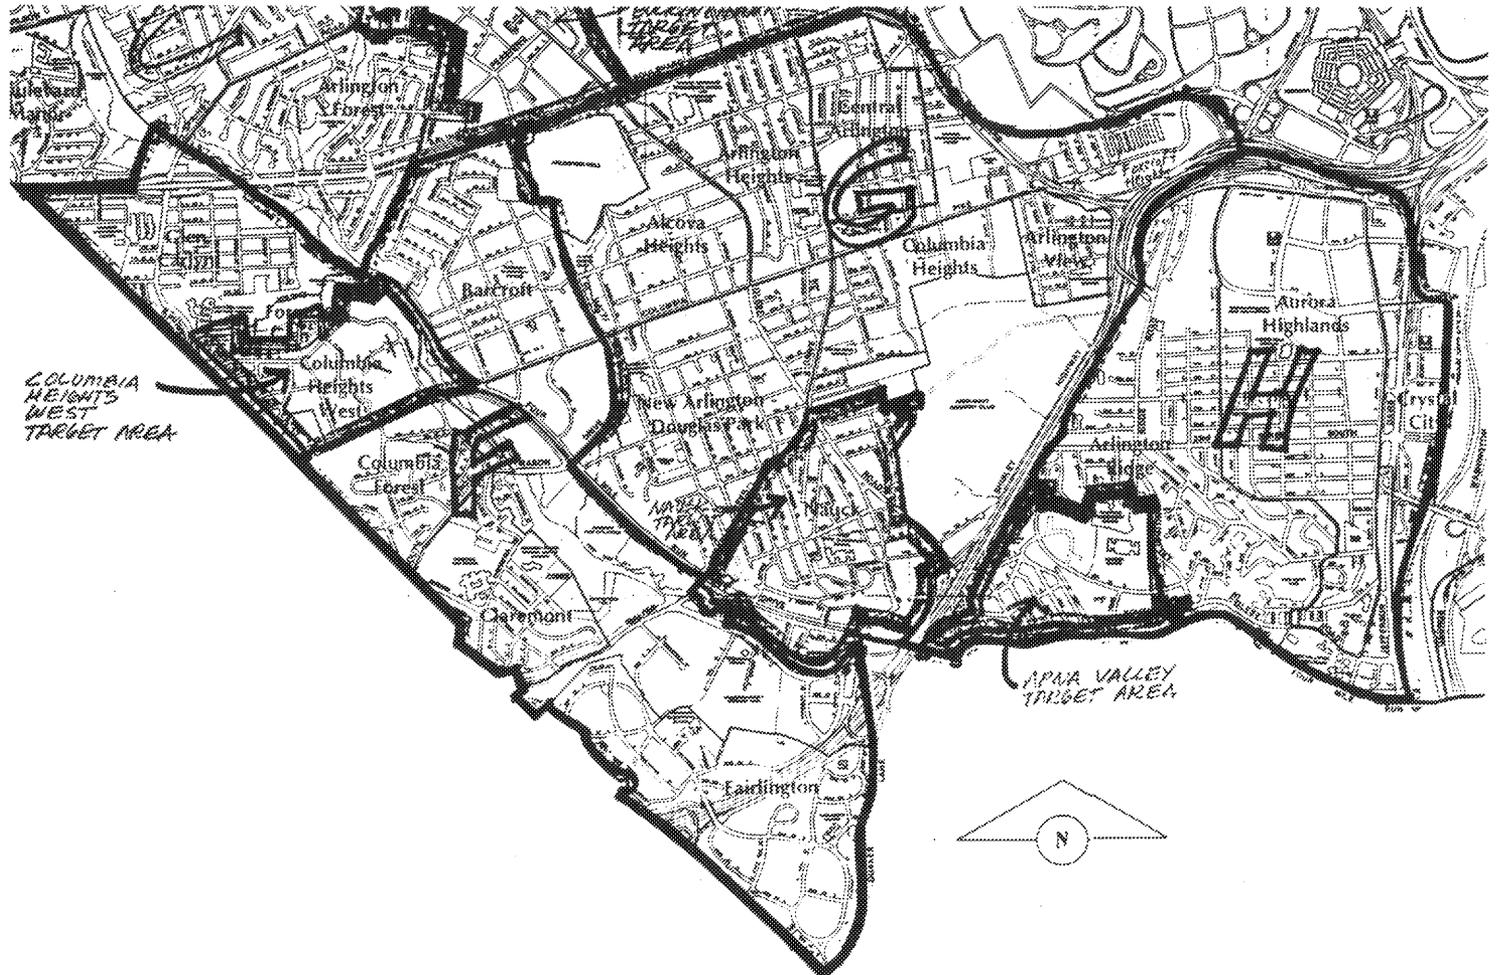

The Architectural Survey Report of Arlington County, Virginia is a multi-phase project funded for a second year (RFP Number 96-97-1) in October 1996 under the terms of the Virginia Department of Historic Resources' Cost-Share Program. The Virginia Department of Historic Resources (VDHR) in conjunction with Arlington County contracted with Tracerics to conduct the second phase of the reconnaissance survey of southern Arlington County, Virginia which included approximately 1000 properties, a detailed survey report, and to make recommendations regarding further study of any, or all, of the resources retaining significance and integrity within the historic context established in Phase I (conducted in 1995-1996).

Scope of Work

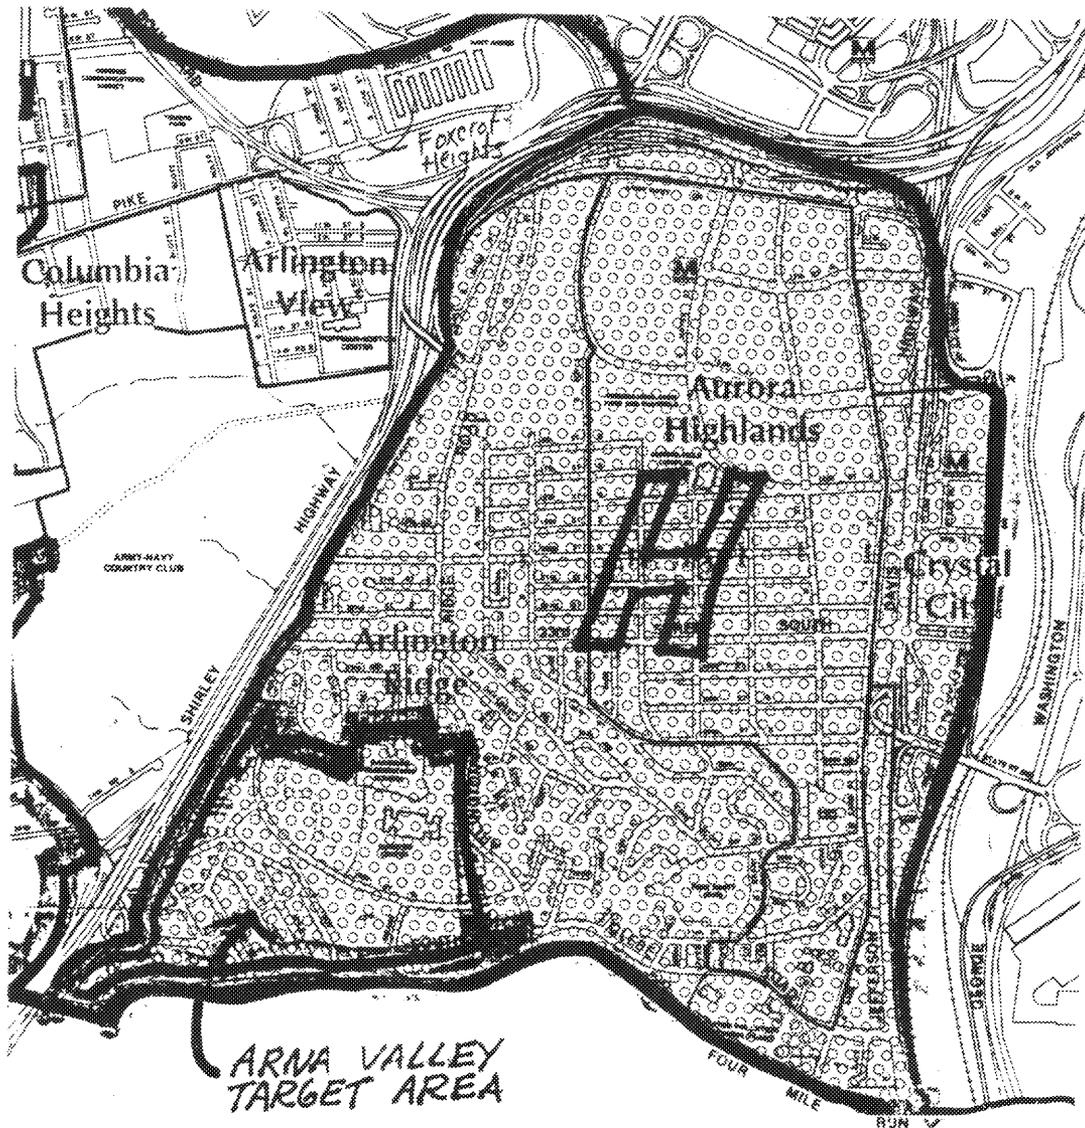

The project anticipated the survey of previously identified properties as well as those resources not previously identified that met the fifty-year-age requirement and were located within the boundaries of Neighborhood Service Areas F, G, and H in the southern portion of Arlington County. Each resource was assessed, surveyed, documented, and photographed at the reconnaissance-level on Virginia Department of Historic Resources Field Forms. This process allowed for a thorough study of each resource, its date of construction substantiated by historic maps, building materials, architectural style and use. All of the properties were entered into the Integrated Preservation Software Database (IPS), which allowed for recordation, comparison and contrast of each of the resources identified in Phases I and II. Within the established significance of Arlington County, each resource was assessed for its contribution with recommendations for further study as a potential individual landmark or historic district.

Staffing

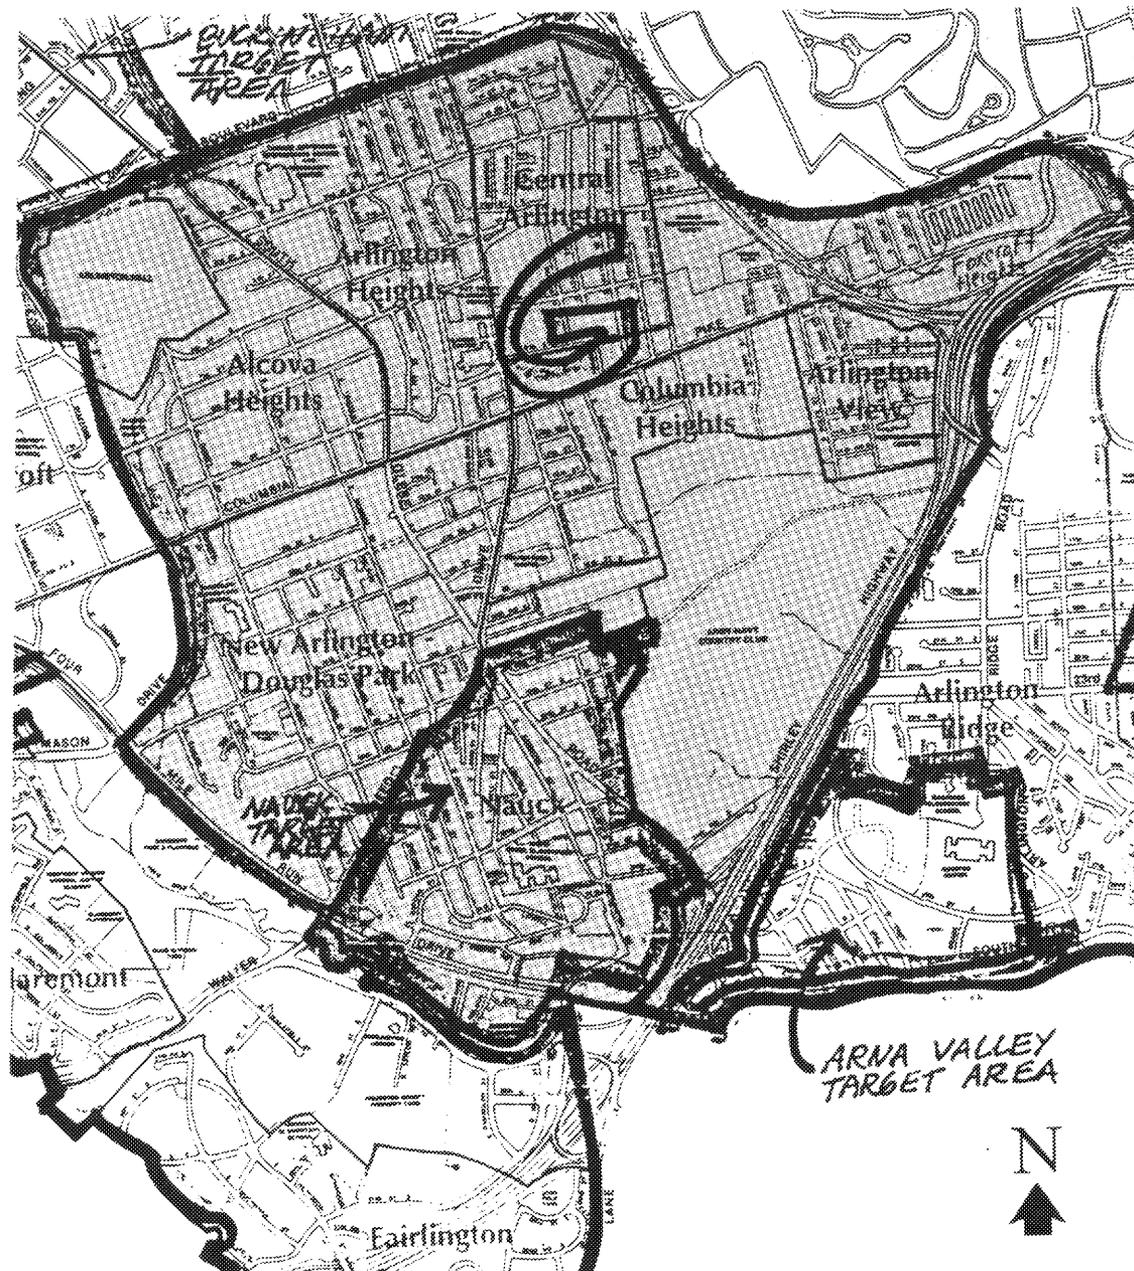

Funded by VDHR in conjunction with Arlington County, Phase II of the Survey of Arlington County was contracted to Tracerics, an architectural history firm specializing in historic preservation. Laura V. Trieschmann served as Project Manager/Architectural Historian, responsible for overseeing the completion of the project, writing the final survey report and final assessment of the resources. The on-site survey, field work, IPS data entry, and initial assessment of the properties was conducted by architectural historians Kathryn A. Gettings, Sheryl Farber Jaslow, and Andrea Bakewell Lowery. Kathryn A. Gettings was responsible for the archival research and documentation conducted at local, state and federal repositories, as well as contacting the community associations.

HISTORIC THEMES

The Virginia Department of Historic Resources has developed eighteen historic themes that capture the context of Virginia's heritage from the earliest times. These themes are defined in the Survey Findings section of this report. Fourteen of the eighteen themes are discussed here as they pertain to the extant historic resources within the survey area of south Arlington County. The most prevalent theme is the Architecture/Community Planning Theme, followed closely by the Domestic Theme. Resources relating to the Commerce/Trade, Education, Religion, Funerary, Government/Law/Political, Military/Defense, Recreation/Arts, Settlement Patterns, Social, Subsistence/Agriculture, Transportation/Engineering, and Ethnicity/Immigration themes were also identified, although only minimally. The remaining four themes -- Health Care/Medicine, Technology/Engineering, Landscape, and Industry/Processing/Extraction -- were not identified during this survey. Whenever possible, the resources were placed within the eighteen historic context themes established by VDHR to allow for a better understanding of the development impacts affecting the survey area.

THEME: DOMESTIC

RESOURCE TYPES: Single-Family Dwellings, Multiple-Family Dwellings, and Domestic Outbuildings

During this phase of the architectural survey of south Arlington County, 986 resources out of a total of 1015 properties were documented as associated with the Domestic Theme. The resource types identified in the survey area include 974 single-family dwellings, 12 multi-family dwellings, and 612 associated outbuildings, such as sheds, carports, well houses, greenhouses, and garages. Intense development of domestic buildings in this area began in the Reconstruction and Growth Period (1865-1917), extending into the World War I to World War II Period (1917-1945). The greatest growth within the survey area occurred between 1930 and 1939, with forty percent of the 986 domestic buildings being erected during this nine-year span. This increase in domestic buildings can be directly associated with the need for working and middle class housing for the employees brought to the Washington Metropolitan Area by the federal government. The construction of multi-family dwellings, which provided the greatest concentration of housing within a limited area, was introduced in Arlington in the 1930s. This practice reached its culmination in the survey area during the World War I to World War II Period (1917-1945), with the construction of twenty-six multi-family dwellings.

The domestic resources in the survey area, both single-family and multi-family dwellings, are typically one-and-a-half stories to two stories in height, constructed of wood on solid brick foundations. Wood frame was documented 575 times, while masonry was noted 416 times with the greatest concentration of brick dwellings being in the neighborhood of Arlington Ridge. The roofs are primarily gable (985 documented), and typically clad in asphalt shingles throughout the survey area. The chimneys, predominately constructed of brick, are interior (379 identified). The more modest dwellings in the survey area are three-to five-bays wide with a central entry; however, a significant number of side-passage dwellings were documented. In total, 667 or sixty-eight percent, of the single-family dwellings have one-story porches on the facade. While the double-hung, wood sash window was overwhelmingly prominent throughout the survey area, casement windows were remarkably documented 221 times. The architectural styles in the survey area range from the Greek Revival style to the International style of the latter half of the 20th century. The dominant domestic style is the Colonial Revival style, comprising 430 out of the 986 (or forty-four percent) of the domestic properties surveyed. The Bungalow/Craftsman style, which also illustrates a building form, was documented 369 times.

Interestingly, the Phase I Architectural Survey of south Arlington County concluded that the majority of the dwellings were constructed between 1920-1929, ten years earlier than the average date identified during Phase II. Additionally, the residential building types surveyed in Phase I were predominately equipped with exterior end brick chimneys, rather than the interior brick chimney which dominated the Phase II survey area. The plan, form, and massing of the dwellings, however, were consistent between the survey phases. One dwelling dating from the Colony to Nation Period (1750-1789) was identified during Phase I, while the oldest residential buildings identified during Phase II were constructed during the Antebellum Period (1830-1860). While the Phase I survey area, which generally focused on Neighborhood Service Area H, did experience early development, the community has undergone vast late-20th-century growth; thereby diminishing much of its historic context. Ironically, while the Phase II survey area has not experienced as much late-20th-century growth, fewer pre-Civil War properties are extant.

Typically, the majority of the suburban domestic buildings had associated outbuildings. Since most suburbs throughout the nation developed after 1900 were predicated on the use of automobiles, garages were an essential feature. A total of 338 garages were identified during the survey, 269 of which were determined to be historically associated with the primary dwelling. Instigated by the mail-order catalogues in the 1910s and 1920s, the garages and other associated outbuildings tended to be similar in style and form to the dwelling house. Unlike the garages, the sheds in the survey area appear to be extremely unassuming and of a prefabricated nature. The utilitarian function of the buildings dictated the one-story, front-gable form of the sheds. A total of 213 sheds were documented in the survey area, only twenty-seven of which were ascertained to be historic.

While the style and forms will be discussed under the Domestic Theme, a more in-depth description and comparison will be examined in the Architecture/Community Planning Theme. For a discussion of residential development during the European Settlement to Society Period (1607-1750); the Colony to Nation Period (1750-1789); and the Early National Period (1789-1830) see "First Phase of an Architectural Survey in Arlington County," (September 1996).

Antebellum Period (1830-1860)

As documented during both Phases I and II, only a limited number of domestic structures were erected at the beginning of this period, largely because of the sole ownership of the vast land patents and the agricultural nature of the area. By the middle part of the 19th century, however, the nature of the county was being transformed as transportation in and around Arlington was greatly improved by the construction of canals, trading routes, and railroads. By the 1840s, residential development began in earnest within the elevated central sections of south Arlington County as numerous dwelling houses were being erected by relocating northerners and vacationing residents of Washington, DC seeking a reprieve from the sweltering summer heat.

Only four domestic buildings were identified in the survey that dated from the Antebellum Period -- Sunnydale Farm (000-1327), Springhill Farm [Alcova] (000-2017), Kollmeyer-Corbett House (000-1765), and the house at 1504 South Randolph Street (000-1822).

Sunnydale Farm was constructed during the mid-19th century in the Greek Revival style. The imposing building, substantially altered numerous times, stands as one of the oldest resources in Aurora Highlands. Similarly, Springhill Farm was erected between 1847 and 1860 by Samuel Davidon King. The property, renamed Alcova, consisted of 163 acres that constitutes much of present day Alcova Heights. The wood frame building was substantially altered and enlarged, thus exhibiting traits of the Italianate and Classical Revival styles. Despite this, however, the original Greek Revival form is evident on the southeast corner. The original main block was three bays wide and consisted of a side-passage, double-pile plan. This portion of the building is currently engulfed in the Classical Revival style portico that extends the full-height of the building and reoriented the facade to the north.

The Kollmeyer-Corbett House was constructed between 1850 and 1860 in the New Arlington/Douglas Park neighborhood. The building, currently exhibiting the Colonial Revival style, was originally designed with the traditional central-passage, single-pile plan. Local history contends the building was the overseer's house on the property of Sewell B. Corbett, a prominent member of the county courts from 1866 to 1869.

The house at 1504 South Randolph Street, dating from 1850, also exhibits the same central-passage plan. Extensively altered, the building's particularly close proximity to the road is one of the few extant indications of its original function as a carriage house.

Civil War Period (1861-1865)

During the Civil War Period (1861-1865), the Arlington area was occupied by the Army of the Potomac. Immediately upon arriving, the Federal troops began to erect forts, lunettes, ravines, and bridges in an effort to protect the nation's capital. The residents of the area, accustomed to traveling to Washington, DC and local ports, were circumscribed by the troops and forced to abandon their traditional way of life. Unfortunately, land and buildings were appropriated for military use, and inevitably suffered from misuse or destruction. The economy of Arlington, like the rest of the Confederacy, quickly declined. Consequently, many historic resources were destroyed and no domestic improvements were made during this period in the survey area, or Arlington as a whole. Not surprisingly, no domestic resources dating from this period were documented in Phase I either.

Reconstruction and Growth Period (1865-1917)

During the Reconstruction and Growth Period, the number of residents grew from 3,185 in 1870 to 6,430 residents in 1900. By 1910, the population had nearly doubled, growing to 10,231.¹ The growth and development of the Washington Metropolitan Area, which paralleled that of the entire nation, began to feverishly expand following the Civil War. Consequently, the last third of the 19th century was marked by a power struggle between architects, plan-book writers, builders, and social reformers, all of whom tried to gain control over the vast new middle-class housing market. At stake were not only millions of new customers and the opportunity to make a fortune, but the ideals of home and family and the chance to once again make single-family housing a standard for the nation.² Beginning with the horse-drawn railway cars and later with the electric trolley lines, the burgeoning transportation facilities greatly aided in the promotion of a new vision of suburban neighborhood living.

Expanding on the Late Victorian trends that began in the Civil War Period, the architecture of the Reconstruction and Growth Period in Virginia included more elaborate detailing and intricate floor plans. With little attempt to be historically precise, the stylistic detailing was freely adapted from both medieval and classical precedents. Typical styles of the period included the Second Empire, Stick, Queen Anne, Shingle, and Richardsonian Romanesque, all of which often incorporated traditional elements from the Gothic Revival and Italianate styles. Many of the domestic buildings of the Victorian era had irregular plans, strong asymmetrical facades, and steeply pitched roofs. The plans provided a diversity not previously experienced with an emphasis on human scale and domestic comfort.

Within the survey area, 156 domestic resources were identified as associated with the Reconstruction and Growth Period (1865-1917), all of which are single-family dwellings. Following a nominal development spurt at the beginning of the 20th century, the majority of the dwellings dating from this period, a total of fifty-eight, were erected between the years of 1910 and 1915. During this period, transportation lines, community services such as water and sewer, and the influx of government workers caused a substantial rise in the population of the survey area, which was developing rapidly as a suburban community of the District of Columbia.

The dominant form and detailing in the survey area for this period followed the Queen Anne style, with fifty-four examples identified. The Bungalow/Craftsman style was documented fifty-two times. Interspersed throughout the area were numerous examples of Colonial Revival, Greek Revival, Gothic Revival, and Italianate style dwellings. Traditionally, the domestic buildings were one-and-a-half stories or two stories in height with full-width porches on the facades. Of the 156 domestic resources, a total of 135 have porches. The roof-lines are primarily low-pitched side-, front-, or multiple gables. The low pitch of the roofs directly related to the small number of dormers, just thirty-three in all.

One of the oldest dwellings located in the survey area that dates from the Reconstruction and Growth Period (1865-1917) is the Italianate-style dwelling at 2415 South First Street (000-1932). This modestly adorned dwelling did not incorporate many of the commonly applied embellishments associated with the period, instead drawing from traditional stylistic trends such as the Greek Revival style of the Antebellum Period. Dating from between 1870 and 1885, the five-course American bond brick building has the traditional front gable roof with overhanging eaves. This simple box form, popularized by the Greek Revival style, has a side-passage, double-pile plan. Due to the narrow plan, the building form was commonly utilized in large cities. In the case of 2415 South First Street, the building is freestanding and set back from the road at the center of a large yard. The segmental arch of the single-leaf entry opening on the east elevation suggests the orientation of the facade was altered when South First Street was laid.

The traditional I-house retained its popularity during the latter part of the 19th century. Yet, in contrast to the house at 2415 South First Street, the I-house form was stylistically detailed by applied ornament associated with the fashionable trends. The cross gable roof, open pediment at the central bay of the side gable I-house form was one of the most popular elements throughout Virginia. The I-house form was also often enlarged by the construction of one- to two-story ells that gave the building a T- or L-shaped plan. Another popular variation to the form was enlargement of the front parlor by a two-story canted or square bay that was often encircled by a one-story wrap-around porch. The house at 1420 South Glebe Road (000-1804) is one of the better examples of this I-house variation.

Typically five bays wide and two bays deep, the I-house building form has a central-passage, single- or double-pile plan. The use of the passage as a summer hall that was popular during the early part of the 19th century had changed with the introduction of numerous asymmetrically placed window openings and the wrap-around porch. Thus, the hall was reduced in width and served as a connecting hyphen that usually accommodated the main stair.

By the turn of the 20th century, however, the domestic form was once again being interpreted for economy and convenience. The resulting Bungalow form mimicked the plan and massing traditionally associated with the fashionable Queen Anne style; yet, the bungalowoid form is invariably one to one-and-a-half stories in height. Overwhelmingly known as a style rather than a form, the Bungalow was covered by a low-pitched, intersecting gable roof that encompassed the wrapping porch. The irregular plan allowed for additional window openings and direct access to the porch from various secondary rooms. The modest arrangement of the wood frame buildings made them one of the most popular low- to middle-income forms in numerous growing suburban communities across the United States. The form was inevitably linked with the Craftsman style, popular between 1905-1930. The modest form of the Bungalow was often trimmed with stone and brick, half-timbering, exposed rafter ends, multi-light fixed windows, and massive porch supports, thus, melding the Bungalow form with the Craftsman style perpetually. As the second most popular form during the Reconstruction and Growth Period, the Bungalow form of south Arlington County was equally embellished with Late Victorian and Craftsman detailing.

Another of the most popular building forms of the late 19th and early 20th centuries was the American Four-square, commonly ornamented with Colonial Revival- and Craftsman-style detailing. The term Four-square is often used in reference to an architectural style, yet it means a particular house form -- just as Bungalows and cabins are forms rather than styles.

The two-story, four-room-per-floor house plan without a center hall is a much-used concept that refers to the hall/parlor plan of the 18th century. The Foursquare is characteristically distinguished by its two-story height, hipped or pyramidal roofs with pronounced eaves and dormers that light an extra half-story, large front porches, and the lack of ornate exterior ornament. The overall shape is a cube, and the main entry opening is generally located off-center.³

One excellent illustration of the American Foursquare exhibiting the Colonial Revival style is the Olcott House (000-2133). This imposing dwelling was constructed in 1900 by W. Harry and Alice Hedrick Olcott to replace their previous home that had been destroyed by fire.

Two of the most distinctive domestic structures identified are located at 1533 South 11th Street (000-1658) and 1006 South Queen Street (000-1653). Erected between 1890 and 1910, the house at 1533 South 11th Street is a one-and-a-half-story frame dwelling with a shotgun plan. One room wide, shotgun houses typically featured a gable-end entry and consisted of two or three all-purpose rooms placed back to back. Associated primarily with the rural South, the shotgun traditionally was used for workers' and tenants' housing, and, by the 1920s, was found nationwide. The only documented examples in the survey area, the two shotgun dwellings have limited detailing and have been significantly enlarged and altered. The neighboring context, as well as the reconstructed brick foundations, strongly suggest that the buildings were moved to their present site.

World War I to World War II Period (1917-1945)

During the World War I to World War II Period (1917-1945), the county as a whole was developing at a rapid rate as a suburban community with strong ties to Washington, DC. Many of the employees under the New Deal programs of the 1930s relocated to Arlington during this period. The number of Arlingtonians continued to grow, with the population reaching 26,615 residents in 1930. This number was nearly doubled ten years later, in 1940, with a total of 57,040 residents. Of those employed in 1940, more than forty percent were involved with the government on a local, state, and federal basis. Additionally, the growing number of government jobs and city wages caught the attention of local farmers, who began selling their land to speculating real estate developers.

Between 1917 and 1945, the survey area saw its greatest phase of development, with the construction of 829 domestic dwellings (eighty-four percent of the domestic resources identified). Of those 829 buildings, 816 were single-family dwellings and, for the first time in southern Arlington County, twenty-six were multiple-family dwellings. Two of the multiple-family dwellings included in the survey were actually apartment complexes, providing approximately sixteen domestic units. The remaining multiple-family examples were twin dwellings that shared an interior party wall.

Beginning in 1917, Arlington County grew to become the largest suburb of Washington, DC, due to numerous domestic resources within the survey area being erected to primarily serve the growing government population. Between the years 1930 and 1939, the greatest number of single- and multiple-family domestic resources were constructed, 404 of the 829 surveyed form this period. Typically, the buildings were one-and-a-half stories to two-and-a-half stories in height with one- and three-bay-wide front porches. The plan of the dwellings usually had a central passage and were two rooms deep. Roof-lines were overwhelmingly gabled, clad in asphalt shingles. Continuing the architectural styles and plans of the previous period, the domestic buildings of the World War I to World War II Period (1917-1945) were primarily erected in the Bungalow/Craftsman and Colonial Revival styles. The Bungalow/Craftsman style dominated the early part of the period, being overwhelmingly substituted by 1930 with the Colonial Revival style.

The Colonial Revival style is the most prevalent style of domestic resources dating from this period with 409 examples noted. The form typically has a central-passage plan, although a substantial number of side-passage plans were documented. The rectangular buildings measure three to five bays wide with a variety of rooflines. Drawing from several architecturally popular styles of the early part of the 19th century, the Colonial Revival style exhibits accentuated entry doors, normally decorated with pediments supported by pilasters or slender columns. Dormers range in form from front gable, semi-circular arched, and eyebrow windows.

The neighborhood of Arlington Ridge contains one of the greatest concentrations of high-style Colonial Revival buildings from the World War I to World War II period. These dwellings are commonly constructed of brick with side gable or hipped roofs clad in slate tiles. Three to five bays wide, the dwellings of Arlington Ridge are larger in scale and plan than those of neighboring Colonial Revival-style dwellings. Another notable distinction is the high-style ornamentation displayed on the Arlington Ridge dwellings, a trend that was reduced by the mass production of domestic dwellings to meet the growing housing needs of the nation's capital in the 1930s and 1940s. This more modest interpretation is visible on the southern part of Arlington Ridge Road where the two-story brick dwellings are virtually identical in plan, form, massing, material, and have limited stylistic ornamentation.

The Bungalow/Craftsman style was the second most dominant style and form of domestic structure during this period with 301 properties noted. In contrast to the bungalowoid form of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, the Bungalow/Craftsman-style domestic buildings of this period of intense development tended to be more modest and smaller in scale. Often, the wrapping porches indicative of the form were limited to the facade and, in several instances, they were enclosed to provide additional living space.

The number of domestic dwellings following the Bungalow/Craftsman form and style greatly increased at the beginning of this period because of the availability of kit-house and mail-order plans. The largest, and by far the most well known, of the mail-order companies was Sears, Roebuck and Company of Chicago, Illinois. The company began to design and sell house kits in the mid-1890s, and in its three decades of operation, Sears made a substantial contribution to 20th-century housing in America. Sears, however, was not the only American company to manufacture or sell houses through mail-order catalogs, nor was it the only company to sell house designs. The late 19th and early 20th centuries were ripe for entrepreneurs who sold architectural plans as well as the houses themselves. The Hodgson Company, Aladdin Homes, Ray H. Bennett Lumber Company and Montgomery Ward all had their start in the housing business between 1895 and 1910. One of the reasons for the popularity of Sears houses was that they consciously reflected popular American tastes of the period. All shipping was done by rail; consequently the largest concentration of mail-order houses is in the Northeast and Midwest, areas that were served by many rail lines.⁴

It has been documented that Arlington County contained numerous examples of mail-order and catalog houses, particularly in those communities located within close proximity to Washington, DC and to the rail lines. South Arlington, where the survey was conducted, contains examples of mail-order and catalog housing, many of which are genuine examples. Commonly, builders and real estate developers purchased a plan and proceeded to erect numerous examples of the building based on the original mail-order design. Consequently, positive identification of mail-order and catalog houses during a reconnaissance survey is nearly impossible; however, at least sixteen possible houses have been identified. The date of construction for all possible examples, which ranges from 1920 to 1944, was largely based on the date provided in reproduced mail-order catalogs.

The domestic kit-house examples typically had a bungalowoid form, trimmed with Craftsman-style detailing that was mass-produced. A few examples of the American Four-square form were also documented as genuine examples of kit-houses.

The increasing need for mass-produced housing at a low cost led to the reinvention of the Cape Cod form, popularized early in the 18th century. The form is one to one-and-a-half stories in height with a side gable roof and an end chimney. Unlike its ancestor, the 20th-century Cape Cod house was pierced with dormers that allowed the upper story to be more fully utilized. The facades were commonly marked with entry porticoes or porches. Like the I-house form of the late 19th century, the Cape Cod was augmented by rear additions and projecting bays on the facade. Stylistic detailing followed the Colonial Revival style.

One of the most distinct building forms being erected in Arlington County during this period was the multiple-family dwelling, demonstrating the influences of the rowhouses that populated urban Washington, DC since the early part of the 19th century. Twenty-four illustrations of the twin dwelling were noted, interspersed within the freestanding single-family neighborhoods. The form afforded two single-family dwellings joined by a separating party wall on the interior, allowing for yard space on three sides. Covered by a side gable roof, the buildings are four bays wide, providing two bays per dwelling.

The identical form, massing, and style of these twin dwellings within select neighborhoods strongly suggests that they were constructed in the 1930s by a single developer. Examples include:

Similarly, the apartment buildings that first emerged during this period, displayed symmetrically boxy forms with regular plans. From the exterior, the buildings read as large central-passage dwellings; yet, on the interior, they consist of approximately eight units each. Only two such examples were noted -- 702 South 22nd Street (000-1387) and 710 South 22nd Street (000-1389).

The New Dominion Period (1945-present)

After the close of World War II, residential and commercial communities began to develop at an increasing rate. With the greatest growth in residents occurring between 1940 and 1950, the population grew from 57,040 to just more than 135,000, requiring additional housing and commercial amenities. The rural image of the county was dissipating as commercial centers like Rosslyn and Crystal City developed.

As a whole the county was impacted by the following conditions: an unprecedented rise in automobile use and relative decline of mass transit; the evolution of regional shopping centers; the presence of the defense community centered at the Pentagon; the growth of high-rise and low-rise apartment housing; and the changing patterns of local traffic circulation.⁵ Today, almost all of the land in Arlington has been developed, and consists of extensive single-family residential neighborhoods, and corridors where commercial, office and multiple-family dwellings dominate.

However, under the criteria established for this architectural survey, which directly follows the federal and state government guidelines, no resources less than fifty years old were to be included unless they were architecturally significant. While a vast majority of Arlington County domestic resources were erected after 1945, only two distinct domestic buildings from this period were documented during the survey.

The 1946 date for the modest dwelling at 2608 South 1st Street (000-1936) was provided by the present owner who was responsible for its construction. The square form is augmented by an imposing front gable dormer with triple windows, a massive exterior-end brick chimney, and a full-width front entry porch. The building illustrates a reduction of applied ornament, a compressed plan under the steeply pitched gable roof, and the waning influence of the Bungalow/Craftsman style by the middle part of the 20th century.

The one-story dwelling at 2915 South 7th Street (000-1987) was constructed between 1947 and 1950. This particular building merits inclusion in the survey because of its cladding. Known as Lustron, the pre-fabricated porcelain enamel material, produced between 1947 and 1950, was an inexpensive alternative to the traditional frame or brick construction materials. Approximately 2500 Lustron buildings were erected during this three-year period across the United States, with the greatest concentration in the Midwest. Interestingly, the Army Corps of Engineers utilized the material at military bases. Sixty such examples are located at the Quantico Marine Base in Quantico, Virginia.

Although slightly altered, the house at 2915 South 7th Street has its original rectangular form with an asymmetrical entry. Additionally, the modest dwelling retains much of its original interior detailing. The enamel panels measure two feet by two feet on the exterior with interior panels measuring two feet by eight feet. The only elements not made of the porcelain enamel were the windows and structural framing. The house at 2915 South 7th Street is the only Lustron-clad domestic resource documented in the survey, although a second example has been seen in the unsurveyed area of northern Barcroft.

Domestic Outbuildings

Typically, the domestic resources constructed in Arlington County had associated outbuildings (613 were identified), particularly garages and sheds. These structures were typically built of wood frame or brick, depending on the construction material of the main dwelling. The most significant number of outbuildings were constructed during the World War I to World War II period, usually simultaneous to the original construction period of the main dwelling. Over 339 garages were documented, remarkably 269 of the examples were historically associated with the main dwelling. The second most common outbuilding identified was the shed, which is actually a catch-all term often applied to any storage or unidentified structure. The form is typically one-story, being constructed of wood frame or pre-fabricated metal. Indicative of the popularity of this latter construction material, only twenty-seven of the 213 sheds documented were considered to be historic.

Other notable outbuildings include non-historic animal-related structures, carports, dovecotes, gazeboes, greenhouses, playhouses, and pools. Numerous historically associated outbuildings were noted, including five barbecue pits, seven guest houses, and three well houses.

In 1900, more than 8,000 cars were on the road nationwide; just fifteen years later the number was well over two million. America's fascination with the automobile made a tremendous impact on the laying of new roads and the siting of resources within a property. In addition, the trend caused the manipulation of traditional styles and forms as the garage struggled to be architecturally compatible and non-intrusive to existing neighborhoods.

By the 1920s, the main dwelling house and the garage were being erected simultaneously. Traditionally, garages of this period mimicked the architectural style and detailing exhibited on the dwelling. This was particularly true in regard to building materials, roof form, and building plan. One illustration of this harmony is seen at 811 South 26th Place (000-1522). The main dwelling and garage, both erected in 1941, are similar in material and form..

Another good example of the architectural style and form of the main dwelling dictating that of the garage can be seen at 2411 South Inge Street (000-1507). The Tudor Revival-style influences include the five-course Flemish bonding, extremely steep-pitched front gable roof, boxed cornice with returns, and multi-light wood doors with vertical panels. An overwhelming number of the garages retain their original entry doors, either folding wood and glass double- or triple-leaf doors or paneled roll-up doors.

The attached garage was a prevalent feature during the latter part of the 1930s and early 1940s for the larger, more imposing dwellings. The garage, which traditionally had a utilitarian function, was being reevaluated as a usable auxiliary space. The garage at 1060 South 26th Road (000-1302) displays this new trend with a balustraded roof that serves as a sun deck accessible from the second story of the main dwelling.

The imposing dwelling at 1030 South 26th Road (000-1552) is an excellent illustration of the non-intrusive garage that was attached to the main dwelling. Constructed in 1941, the Colonial Revival-style dwelling exhibits the traditional three-part plan of the early 19th century with flanking dependencies. The garage inconspicuously took the place of the western dependency, being symmetrically balanced by the sun-room on the east.

Within the more modest neighborhoods, the properties generally were not improved by the construction of garages, forcing the automobile to be parked on the street at the front of the house. Typically in more prominent neighborhoods such as Arlington Ridge, nearly all of the properties were interrupted by curb cuts and driveways. The exception to this, noted during the Phase I survey, was found along the highly traveled Arlington Ridge Road.

THEME: EDUCATION
RESOURCE TYPES: Schools

As similarly noted in Phase I of the architectural survey, few properties associated with the education theme were identified. During Phase II, only two such purpose-built resources out of the 1015 documented, were associated with the Education Theme. Although numerous education-related facilities were located within the survey boundaries, the majority of these resources have not yet reached the fifty-year age requirement established by the federal government, and therefore were not included in the reconnaissance survey.

Of particular note are the two domestic resources associated with the Education theme -- the King-Hilder House at 5501 South 3rd Street (000-2136) and the house at 500 South Jefferson Street (000-2142). The King-Hilder House in Glen Carlyn was constructed in 1891 for Major William King. For a short period between 1891 and 1914, a portion of the Queen Anne-style building was utilized as the first school for the growing community.

The American Four-square dwelling at 500 South Jefferson Street was constructed in 1924 for the Perkins family. During the 1930s, the dwelling was converted into a private school, operated by Cora Worth. The original building form was subsequently enlarged in the 1940s to provide additional classroom space for the kindergarten and first grade classes. The private school continued to operate at 500 South Jefferson Street until 1963, when the dwelling was returned to its original use.

As the residential population of Arlington grew during the World War I to World War II period, so did the need for purpose-built school buildings. In 1920, the average daily attendance in the public schools was 2,022. By 1929, it had reached 4,568, despite the annexation by Alexandria. Records show that after 1929, Arlington had twenty school buildings, the majority of which were located in the Arlington District.

Typically, the children from the Arlington and Washington districts attended high school in the District of Columbia, while the Jefferson District was serviced by the City of Alexandria. Despite the population growth and housing development occurring throughout the county during this period, the Jefferson District, located in the southern section of the county, remained largely rural. This area provided sporadic residential housing for laborers, blue-collar workers, and farmers. Thus, the need for school buildings was minimal in this area until the 1920s when development needs began to extend southward.

The educational system of Barcroft predated the construction of the present Barcroft School (000-2255). Educational classes for the community, which was subdivided in 1903, were originally held at the Barcroft Community Center (000-0040). Listed on the National Register of Historic Places, the one-room Gothic Revival-style community center served the growing neighborhood until 1925 when its educational functions were moved to the Barcroft School at 625 South Wakefield Street. The original portion of the 1925 building was designed in a simplified expression of the Colonial Revival style with a five-part plan emphasized by the stepped front parapet and entry bay. The building was subsequently enlarged to meet the growing number of students. It is presently known as the Barcroft Elementary School.

Following a 1930 survey of Arlington County schools conducted by the Office of Education of the U.S. Department of the Interior, several of the existing schools were enlarged to include additional classroom space. Additionally, the final report required high school facilities for African-Americans, the establishment of a vocational high school and the construction of more school buildings. Prior to funding assistance by the Federal Public Works Administration, however, the Hoffman-Boston School (00-1665) on South 13th Street in Arlington View was constructed in 1930 to provide additional facilities for the elementary level students in the Jefferson School District. The two-story building was designed in the Art Deco style with bricks laid in three-course Flemish bond and large metal frame windows. A distinctive architectural feature of the building are the vertical piers with geometric caps.

THEME: MILITARY/DEFENSE

RESOURCE TYPES: Fortifications and Military Facilities

The most significant military association to be found in Arlington County's history dates to the Civil War, and specifically to the defense of the nation's capital. Seven Civil War military forts were constructed within the boundaries of the survey area, only one of which is extant. Additionally the survey area contains a defense facility associated with World War II. Arlington Hall for Girls (00-18) was taken over by the United States Army for highly secretive purposes in the 1940s. The Hall remains in the hands of the army, and thus was not included in the survey.

The defense of the District of Columbia necessitated occupation of the Virginia shore of the Potomac River, and on May 23-24, 1861, Federal troops entered Virginia. In addition to the erection of the forts, several extant domestic and agricultural properties were seized by the federal government for use as headquarters, military hospitals, and in an effort to control residents. Three such properties were recorded during the survey, all of which are located in the New Arlington/Douglas Park neighborhood.

The most historically significant of the three is the Travers Cemetery (000-1757) at 1309 South Monroe Street. A detailed significance statement regarding the cemetery, the only property of this type recorded in the survey, is discussed under the Funerary Theme of this report. Located a quarter mile south of the Travers property, the federal government seized Sewell Corbett's property as the site of Fort Berry, which was erected in June 1863 (now the site of the dwelling at 3525 South 17th Street -- 000-1770). With the officer quarters and mess hall located adjacent to the Travers, the cemetery was the site of food preparation during the Civil War. It was depicted on an 1861 map published by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, noting the boundaries of the graveyard as 100-150 feet wide and 450-500 feet long.

The original dwelling at 1212 South Irving Street (000-1728) was seized by Federal troops and occupied as defense headquarters. The main dwelling was subsequently destroyed, although the original foundations remain. The property was improved by the construction of the Miles Munson House between 1890-1905. Similarly, the mid-19th century Kollmeyer-Corbett House at 1708 South Lincoln Street (000-1765) served the army as a headquarters and military hospital.

THEME: RELIGION

RESOURCE TYPES: Places of Worship

The Phase II reconnaissance survey of south Arlington County revealed only five resources related to the Religion Theme within the survey area. The denominations include one Baptist church, one Methodist church, one temple, and one Vietnamese Martyrs congregation. The oldest of these congregations is the Arlington United Methodist Church (000-2221), however, the present building was erected in 1945. The oldest building recorded is located at 915 South Wakefield Street (000-2243), which is presently occupied by the Blessed Vietnamese Martyrs Church. Also of note is the True Salvation Temple at 2116 South Nelson Street (000-2040), dating from 1949. This building was constructed for Daisy Robinson by builder Roger Pickenpeck.

The Arlington United Methodist Church was established in 1859, holding its earliest services at Hunter's Chapel at the corner of S. Glebe Road and Columbia Pike (the present site of the Westmont Shopping Center 000-2207). The congregation was forced to worship in the homes of local residents after the chapel was destroyed during the Civil War. In 1870, services were held at the Old Columbia School House, and by 1894, a new Columbia Pike church was constructed. The growing congregation the church constructed the present church building at 716 South Glebe Road in 1945 (000-2221).

At the turn of the 20th century, the closest Presbyterian church for residents of Alcova and Columbia Heights was the Ballston Presbyterian Church at the intersection of North Glebe Road and Wilson Boulevard. By 1906, Miles Munson began to hold Sunday school class at his home for local residents (000-1728). That same year, a mission church was established under the direction of the Ballston church. Eventually independent, the Arlington Presbyterian Church erected their first church building in 1909 on the north side of Columbia Pike, about 200 feet west of Monroe Street. By 1919, a larger building was needed to house the growing congregation, and an addition was erected. Unfortunately, the original church was destroyed by fire on December 20, 1924.

The present site of the Arlington Presbyterian Church (000-2219) was purchased by the congregation on May 1, 1925. A prefabricated wooden building, known as the Little Chapel, was erected. In 1930, with funding provided by the national Mission Board, a new church building was constructed with seating for 240 worshippers. The ground breaking ceremony was held on October 12, 1930. The population of the congregation had increased greatly by the 1940s. In 1946, membership had grown to 605, rising to 725 by 1949. Luckily plans to expand the present building had begun in 1945. Local church architects, McLeod and Ferrara were retained and, by 1949, additional funding allowed for the construction of a new building. It was constructed by the Cowles Construction Company for a low bid of $99,987 with the ground breaking held on June 26, 1949. Services were relocated to the Colonial Revival building on May 21, 1950.

The Arlington Baptist Church was established on January 25, 1928, although a church building was not constructed until 1930. Services were originally held at Springhill Farm [Alcova] (000-2017) at 3435 South 8th Street until the building was completed. This wood frame church was located at 3600 South 7th Street, being enlarged by a wing addition in 1932. The enlargement was a notable indication that the modest church building was proving to be too small for the growing congregation. In 1940, architect H.L. Cain was contracted to design a new brick church building in the popular Colonial Revival style. The building was completed in 1941 for a cost of $19,400 by the Offutt Construction Company. By 1951, it was enlarged by a wing addition designed by McLeod and Ferrara. This addition prompted the relocation of the original wood frame church building to the west. The second church building was renovated and enlarged again by architects J. Raymond Mims and Sons.

THEME: SOCIAL

RESOURCE TYPES: Community Center

The Phase II survey of south Arlington County documented a single property associated with the Social Theme -- The Hoffman-Boston School (000-1665). The Hoffman-Boston School on South 13th Street in Arlington View was constructed in 1930 to provide additional facilities for the elementary level students in the Jefferson School District. The two-story building was designed in the Art Deco style with bricks laid in three-course Flemish bond and large metal frame windows. A distinctive architectural feature of the building is the vertical piers with geometric caps.

The building has served a dual purpose, functioning primarily as a school with social activities as a secondary service. Known as the Carver Community Center, the one-story addition was constructed on the north elevation of the main block of the school building in the late 1970s or early 1980s.

THEME: RECREATION/ARTS THEME

RESOURCE TYPES: Theaters

The Phase II survey of south Arlington County recorded a single property associated with the Recreation/Art Theme -- the Arlington Theater (000-2214).

The booming motion picture industry required a building type of its own by the turn of the 20th century. In contrast to traditional theater design, whose lineage could be traced to antiquity, motion picture theater architecture in the United States drew on commercial building designs to accommodate melodramas, traveling shows, operas, and concert halls. Deriving from the traditional 19th century forms, which included storefronts, churches, hotels, royal palaces, and period revival styles, the modern motion picture theater conceptually had its source in the passion for the exotic and the desire for novelty. Selectively merging the old conventions with new requirements and symbols, familiar architectural remnants were used in motion picture theaters.

Once established, the motion picture theater evolved in both type and style, drawing from popular as well as elitist traditions. The appearance of feature-length films, which told an artistically edited story, coincided with the development of feature motion picture theaters. Movies in the 1910s and 1920s were silent adventures and romances, seldom very realistic and often set in an imaginary, exotic locale. Movie palaces were equally exotic and romantic in mood, seeking not to break the spell until the patron left the building. Amenities, such as lounges, ushers, and elaborate gathering spots, reinforced this ambiance. Architects of this period employed then-popular historical styles, stretching these styles to their limits in unheard of romantic fantasies. Necessary features such as the box office and marquee combined elements associated with both popular and serious entertainment. Marketing and advertising techniques were borrowed from commercial traditions, as well as the circus. Rich materials and fabrics, plush seats, draperies, chandeliers, lounges, and smoking rooms echoed grand hotels, government institutions, and private clubs. For the first time, builders and managers gave serious consideration to safety, sight lines, maximum capacity, heating, lighting, and ventilation. The impact of the expanded film format prompted higher ticket prices, reserved seats, scheduled showings, and longer runs.

By the mid-1920s, the motion picture palace, with all its trappings, was an accepted and cherished part of American life. Theater openings and movie premieres drew crowds far in excess of the number who could actually attend each show. The largest concentrations of grand-scale movie theaters were in the major metropolitan areas - Chicago, Los Angeles, and New York. Yet theater patrons in less populous cities such as Minneapolis, Seattle, Denver, and Washington, DC could take their pick from among ten or more palaces. Even small towns generally could boast one or two fancy movie houses, clustered along Main Street or around the town square. Traditionally, the nickelodeon owners had to purchase the two- or three-reel films, paying for the films by the foot. By the second decade of the 20th century, with the formation of the Hollywood studios and theater chains, leasing a motion picture to several theaters simultaneously became common practice. The early exhibitors quickly expanded their operations to meet the increasing demand for and availability of films.

With the introduction of the talkies in 1927, the movie palace no longer needed to supplement the mechanical equipment with live entertainment. Whereas the traditional theater and early movie palaces had been designed around the stage and live performances, the new movie theater was planned around the projection booth and speakers. Sound required renovation of existing theaters to accommodate the speakers, while in new buildings, it often eliminated the need for a stage or orchestra pit. Theater owners responded quickly to these changes because of the popularity of the talkies and the money to be saved.

The heavy rush to build ever-more elaborate theaters in the late 1920s and early 1930s resulted in an overabundance of picture palaces with too many seats to fill. The economic hardships of the Depression eventually fostered some commercial creativity on the part of the theater owners. Extravagant promotional stunts were concocted in attempts to boost box office totals. Some theaters arranged for movie-stars to appear at grand premiers, while others could only offer contests sponsored by area businesses or charities. For the duration of World War II, promotional displays in the lobbies were replaced by booths selling war stamps and savings bonds.

Despite adversity, movie attendance peaked in the 1940s as the public embraced messages of patriotism and romance, and theater chains responded to the demand. Neighborhood movie houses reflected America's new emphasis on family and their love of the automobile, by showing up in suburban locations. As movies became films with a more serious attitude, the seemingly anachronistic ornate architecture and design disappeared from the buildings. Both product and process were stripped of their artificial decoration in favor of a more honest examination of life. In the late 1940s and 1950s, with the disbanding of studio-owned theater chains, the introduction of the television, and the emphasis on suburbanization, movie attendance declined. Eventually, customer amenities were reduced to nothing more than the refreshment stand. The vestiges of lighted signs were the only indications of a motion picture theater as the buildings evolved back into storefront spaces.

Built in profusion on valuable downtown city blocks, theaters incurred heavy losses and rising expenses. Thus, the over building of the 1930s led directly to the theatrical demolition derby of the 1960s.⁶ Theater owners responded with creative, although somewhat destructive, solutions to their problems. Some subdivided their auditoriums, occasionally piggybacking or twinning a screening room. More than a few owners chose to revive their long dormant stage apparatus to put on rock concerts, supplementing dwindling movie revenues. By the 1970s and 1980s, the era of preservation brought restoration of downtown picture palaces, while the construction of suburban multi-cinemas commenced.

The Arlington Theater was constructed in 1939 along the highly traveled Columbia Pike for C. F. Munson by builder A.H. Brooks. The prominent Art Deco theater, a common architectural style for theater design in the 1930s and 1940s, has the stylistic vertical thrust, ziggurat roofline, surface articulation, and eye-catching marquee and sign. The recreational use of the building is supported by the several commercial stores that flank the main theater entry and wrap around the corner of South Walter Reed Drive. The Arlington Theater is one of the most significant extant examples of this building type in the Washington, DC region.

THEME: COMMERCE/TRADE

RESOURCE TYPES: Specialty Stores, Professional and Financial Institutions

Populated by the commercial and trade industry today, south Arlington County historically was limited in the number of resources associated with the Commerce/Trade theme. Early businesses in the area were generally associated with the farm and agricultural industry; yet, because the need for agricultural produce was not within the boundaries of the rural county, the products were transported to the port cities of Alexandria and Georgetown. Small temporary commercial enterprises, such as retail stores and taverns, were located along the major transportation routes or at small crossroads to assist the local residents. These structures, however, did not survive the rapid growth and construction that occurred during the 20th century.

A total of twenty-eight properties associated with the Commerce/Trade Theme were recorded during the Phase II comprehensive survey of south Arlington County. Two distinct transportation corridors with concentrated commercial development were identified along Columbia Pike and South 23rd Street. The commercial resources were generally erected on lots previously improved by single-family dwellings, often with the domestic resources being rehabilitated for commercial use.

Illustrations of the conversion of domestic resources for commercial use was noted a total of six times throughout the survey area. Of particular note is the complex of buildings at 310 South 4th Street (000-2147) in Glen Carlyn. The first grocery store, operated by Edward

Hall, for the community was located at the corner of Carlin Spring Road and Third Street. Hall sold his business on March 25, 1912 to William Isaac Besley. Besley received his license as a retail merchant on May 1, 1912, continuing to operate the store until he was forced by financial difficulties to close in 1918. Within three years, Besley had constructed a country store on his property at Fourth Street and Carlin Spring Road. Dating from 1900 to 1915, the property presently contains a main dwelling, guest house, several sheds, and the original store. The one-story wood frame store, exhibiting the form of a shotgun house, is set to the south of the main dwelling, with a landscaped walk extending from the drive to the buildings. Besley continued to operate the modest store until his retirement in 1952.

With the influx of military and federal personnel to the metropolitan area, Arlington County entered its greatest phase of growth and development during the 1920s and 1930s. Consequently, vacant lots were improved with single-family dwellings, thus creating cohesive neighborhoods. By the latter part of the 1920s, the need for amenities to support the residential communities became apparent.

Within each of the planned communities, such as Aurora Highlands and Arlington Ridge, smaller roads and streets that extended from the major routes into the neighborhoods were being adapted for commercial use. This is particularly evident along South 23rd Street, where ten commercial properties were recorded. Extending from Aurora Highlands into Arlington Ridge, South 23rd Street was historically improved with wood frame single-family dwellings that were bungalow in form and style. Three of these dwellings, now serving as commercial specialty stores and office spaces, have been identified in the Phase II survey: house at 539 South 23rd Street (000-1637), house at 543 South 23rd Street (000-1642), and the house at 526 South 23rd Street (000-1648).

Predominately dating from circa 1925, the remaining properties presently lining the eastern end of South 23rd Street were constructed as commercial stores, offices and restaurants. The one- to two-story resources are all constructed of masonry with brick foundations and chimneys. The roofs tend to be flat, composed of a built-up composite material. Some examples include the store at 523-525 South 23rd Street (000-1639), the store at 513-515 South 23rd Street (000-1641), and the commercial building at 529 South 23rd Street (000-1644).

As traditionally was the case with commerce and trade, commercial establishments began to be constructed along major transportation corridors in an effort to attract travelers. Arlington Boulevard, Columbia Pike, Walter Reed Drive, and George Mason Drive were quickly transformed into commercial corridors, supplying restaurants, specialty stores, and offices. While the highly traveled Columbia Pike has been substantially developed and re-developed, numerous examples of the early 1920s and 1930s architecture is present. Twelve historic properties were recorded along Columbia Pike between the 2600 and 3000 blocks, exhibiting a variety of architectural styles ranging from Art Deco to streamlined commercial.

One of the most notable commercial building located in the area was the Old Dominion Bank (000-2201). This particular one-story building is constructed of brick, laid in five-course American bond, at the corner of Columbia Pike and South Walter Reed Drive. It was erected in 1900, making it the oldest resources documented that was associated with the Commerce/Trade theme. Historically, the building had a commercial style flat roof with pedimented entry opening. Now operating as the Bohsali Lebanese Restaurant, the building has a hipped roof clad in regularly placed Spanish tiles with exposed rafter ends. The original pedimented entry, circular medallions in the wall plane of the facade, and elongated semi-circular arched windows are extant.

Adjacent to the Old Dominion Bank is the Arlington Hardware Store at 2920 Columbia Pike (000-2203). This two-story brick building, laid in six-course American bond, is an excellent illustration of the 1920s commercial architecture that once completely line the pike. Traditionally, as seen at the hardware store, the buildings were modest in scale and sited at the roads edge. The location of the buildings allowed passers-by to be attracted by the architectural style of the resource, the ornate signage applied to the facade, and the merchandise displayed in the show windows. In contrast, the commercial facilities erected in the 1940s and 1950s tended to attract shoppers by supplying ample parking and a specialized grouping of stores. This is clearly illustrated at the Westmont Shopping Center at 3233 Columbia Pike (000-2207), which was originally designed in the Art Deco style.

THEME: FUNERARY

RESOURCE TYPES: Cemetery

The number of resources within the south Arlington County survey area associated with the Funerary Theme is limited to one property: the Travers Family Cemetery (000-1757). This family cemetery is one of the rare examples of the funerary practices of the Antebellum Period (1830-1860) in Arlington County.

The dispersed settlement patterns of the Middle Atlantic region and the South often made the custom of churchyard burials impractical for all but those living close to the churches. As extensive plantations were established to facilitate the production of large scale cash crops such as tobacco, several factors often made burial in a churchyard problematical. As towns were located far apart, geographically large parishes were often served by only a single church, and transportation was difficult. The distance of family plantations from churches necessitated alternative locations for cemeteries, which took the form of family cemeteries on the plantation grounds. Usually established on a high, well-drained point of land, the family plots were often surrounded by a fence or wall. Although initially dictated by settlement patterns, plantation burials became the tradition once the precedent was set. Along with a variety of dependencies, agricultural lands, and other features, family cemeteries help illustrate the degree of self-sufficiency sustained by many of these plantations.⁷ Ironically, the oldest burial site at Arlington National Cemetery is the grave of Mary Lee Fitzhugh Custis, the wife of George Washington Parke Custis. Typical of family cemeteries, the burial site of Mary Custis, who died in 1853 at the age of sixty-five, is located approximately 100 yards to the north of Arlington House.

The Travers Family Cemetery (00-1757) is one of the best examples of the family cemetery dating from the Antebellum Period revealed in Arlington County. Relocating from Virginia, the John Travers family settled in the area now known as New Arlington-Douglas Park as early as 1832, purchasing a thirty acre parcel of land at the intersection of Columbia Pike and Glebe Road.⁸ The earliest graves in the cemetery, MET (1830) and WT (1832), predate the Travers' purchase of the land, suggesting the graves were moved to this location. John Travers died in 1837 at age 34 and was buried in the family cemetery. Within a year, Elizabeth Travers married William P. Taylor (1813-1866), a farmer who was nine years her junior.

By April 1851, the Travers land, which had been increased to seventy-four acres, was subdivided into six lots for Elizabeth and each of her five children. Lot 2, which included the cemetery, was allotted to Mary Ann Travers, the youngest of the family. Six years later, it has been documented that only one of the seventeen identified burial sites at the cemetery contains the remains of a non-Travers family member. The sister of neighboring family friends, Dretta Doremus Whitcraft (1862-1900) was "buried in a private cemetery at 1309 South Monroe Street, Arlington" as stated in family records. The archaeological investigation addressed the tradition of "unmarked" graves in the Middle Atlantic and Southern United States during the colonial period and 19th century. Additionally, wooden grave markers were often utilized to memorialize the deceased, however, this type of marker was impermanent and quickly deteriorated. Thus, because of the vast number of Travers descendants living in the area from 1832 to the early part of the 20th century, it appears probable that more than the identified seventeen burials took place at the family cemetery.

⁷ Elisabeth Walton Potter and Beth M. Boland, National Register Bulletin 41: Guidelines for Evaluating and Registering Cemeteries and Burial Places (Washington, D.C.: National Park Service, Interagency Resources Division, 1992), p. 4.

after her marriage to John W. Clement, Mary Ann sold the four-and-a-half-acre tract for $400 to her brother Henry W. Travers.

Located a quarter mile south of the Travers property, the federal government seized Sewell Corbett's property as the site of Fort Berry, which was erected in June 1863 (now the site of the dwelling at 3525 South 17th Street -- 000-1770). With the officers' quarters and mess hall located adjacent to the Travers, the cemetery was the site of food preparation during the Civil War. It was depicted on an 1861 map published by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, noting the boundaries of the graveyard as 100-150 feet wide and 450-500 feet long.

By the early part of the 20th century, the land on which the Travers Family Cemetery stood was subdivided by Seymour Henson, a direct descendent of Anna Travers Henson. In 1924, the cemetery plot was sold to Herbert A. Cleveland. Known as Lot 5, the property consisted of 6,419 square feet. In 1926, it was conveyed to Harry C. Morgan, who in turn sold it to William J. And Carrie M. Stuart in 1945. Between 1925 and 1938, a dwelling house with outbuildings was constructed on the property, directly adjacent to the grave markers. After 1952, the dwelling was razed, preserving the context of the family cemetery.

Archaeological assessments conducted in 1989 at the Travers Family Cemetery indicate that there are two predominant types of markers: professional white marble stones and folk stones of a grayish hue. Of the seventeen visible grave markers, only the stone of Laura V. Whitehead was ornamented with carvings, depicting a closed hand with the index finger pointing to heaven. Based on historic family records, physical evidence and census records,

THEME: ETHNICITY/IMMIGRATION

RESOURCE TYPES: Properties that exemplify the ethos of immigrant or ethnic groups.

Only four extant resources associated with the Ethnicity/Immigration Theme were identified in this on-site survey, three of which were directly associated with the development of Butler-Holmes Subdivision in Central Arlington.

In March 1865, the Congress of the United States had established the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands to help African-American citizens make the transition from servitude to freedom and from wartime to peace. Beyond the provision of assistance to African Americans, the Bureau maintained a number of settlements throughout the South and bordering states. These settlements began under the wartime supervision of the Union army and were managed by the Quartermaster's Department. Perhaps the most famous of the Freedmen's Villages was the community founded in 1863 on the grounds of Arlington House. This village superseded several temporary camps, including Duff Green's Row and Camp Barker in the District of Columbia, becoming a magnet for freed people throughout the area. As a model camp, Freedmen's Village attracted widespread attention and support from both the federal government and 19th-century reformers.⁹ The village proper is presently the site of the Arlington Cemetery, the Pentagon, and the complex system of roads that transverse the area.

The village originally consisted of approximately 100 frame houses that were to temporarily house African Americans. The freed men were required to work for their wages, saving enough to relocate to permanent housing elsewhere. However, many villagers tended to permanently reside in the community, thus, forcing the government to expand the boundaries and purchase additional acreage outside of the village proper. Known as the Arlington Tract, the additional land circumscribed Freedmen's Village. Despite attempts to disband the original village, approximately 148 families were documented as residing in the area in 1890. With the eventual phasing out of the village in the 1890s, residents relocated to nearby communities, such as Arlington View [Johnson's Hill], Nauck, East Arlington, Queen City, and South Washington. Many of these communities, as well as the remnants of the village itself, were destroyed by the construction of the Pentagon and its roadways.

⁹ "Freedmen's Village Museum: The Black Heritage Museum," (Arlington, VA: Arlington Community Foundation, n.d.), brochure.

Two prominent members of Freedmen's Village were William H. Butler and Dr. Henry L. Holmes (1856-1905). These gentlemen, upon being forced to leave the temporary government-supported village, jointly purchased a vast tract of largely undeveloped land adjacent to Fort Myer. The property was subdivided and sold, being referred to as the Butler-Holmes Subdivision. While the community attracted African Americans, it was not exclusive. The rectangular -shaped neighborhood community with its perpendicular roads is now known as Central Arlington.

In addition to being a successful developer, William H. Butler served the county as the Village and Superintendent of Roads for the County. In 1879, Butler constructed a wood frame Queen Anne-style dwelling at 2407 South 2nd Street (000-1916), which continues to be owned and occupied by the Butler family. The house at 2417 South 2nd Street (000-1889), was constructed in 1933 by a descendent of William Butler and continues to be occupied by a descendent of the family.

Similarly, Dr. Holmes erected a modest Bungalow/Craftsman-style dwelling in 1918 at 2803 South 2nd Street (000-1940). In addition to his medical efforts, Dr. Holmes was appointed as the Commissioner of the Revenue for the County. Mrs. Henry Holmes continued to reside in the dwelling until her death in the 1960s.

Planned Communities: Neighborhoods of Southern Arlington County

The commencement of the 20th century heralded major civic, social and governmental improvements throughout the county. By the 1920s, the character of the County had dramatically changed with rapid subdivision and development of suburbs such as Ballston, Cherrydale, and Barcroft. This suburban development is evidenced by the increase in the county's population, from 6,430 in 1900 to 16,040 in 1920.¹⁰ During the 1930s and 1940s, large numbers of houses and garden apartments were constructed throughout the county as Arlington kept pace with the expansion of Federal activities and the demand for housing throughout the metropolitan area. The rapid expansion and enormous development activity of the Northern Virginia suburbs in the 1960s and 1970s transformed the rural, community-based character of Arlington County to the predominately transient urban/suburban area it is today.

During the Phase I Survey of South Arlington, the development history of the communities of Glencarlyn, Nauck, Aurora Highlands, Arlington View, Arlington Ridge, Arna Valley, and Columbia Heights West were documented. Phase II continued with this effort, documenting New Arlington-Douglas Park, Alcovia Heights, Arlington Heights, Foxcroft Heights, Central Arlington, and Barcroft.

New Arlington-Douglas Park

The New Arlington-Douglas Park community is the compilation of two separate housing developments: New Arlington and Douglas Park. The neighborhood development of Douglas Park, also spelled as Douglass Park, first began to appear on historic maps of Arlington County in 1927. This area was historically associated with Sewell B. Corbett, who owned vast acres of property throughout Arlington County in 1907. The newly developed community was bounded to the south by Fort Barnard, Four Mile Run and the Washington and Old Dominion Railroad; Fort Berry and Washington Avenue to the north-northwest, and the Washington-Virginia Electric Railway line and the community of Nauck to the east. About half of the original Douglas Park subdivision, the area southeast of what is now Walter Reed Drive, is now contained within the area of Nauck. The name Douglas Park may derive from the Douglas family, prominent residents of the county. William W. Douglas served as Supervisor for Arlington County between 1904 and 1907.

Similarly, New Arlington had been laid out by 1927. Larger in size, although less densely subdivided in the early years of development, the community was located to the north of ¹⁰ Nan & Ross Netherton, Arlington County in Virginia: A Pictorial History. (Norfolk, VA: The Donning Company, 1987), p. 106.

Douglas Park, south of Columbia Pike. The land had previously been associated with Edward Denterman, William H. Palmer and Sewell B. Corbett. By 1938, as indicated by historic maps, the two communities began to overlap, blending their streets, utilities and neighborhood activities. Later tracts encompassed in the area now known as New Arlington-Douglas Park community included John Travers' Addition, the Joel Whitehead estate, C.B. Munson's Second and Third Additions, the A.E. Dye Plan and the R.R. Dye Plan Subdivision.

Many of the older buildings, predominately located along South Monroe Street, date from the latter part of the 19th century to the early 20th century. Constructed prior to the establishment of the community in 1927, the Queen Anne-style buildings are larger in scale and plan than the more modest Bungalow and Colonial Revival-style dwellings dating from the 1920s through to the 1940s. The construction of these grander dwellings in the Late Victorian period within the rural farm land was prompted by the establishment of the Washington, Arlington, and Falls Church Electric Railway lines, extending as early as 1900 from the District to Rosslyn to Nauck. This streetcar line not only greatly impacted the development of New Arlington-Douglas Park, but spurred residential construction in Central Arlington, Nauck, and Columbia Heights.

Documented on Sanborn maps, the community of New Arlington-Douglas Park developed sporadically during the 1920s-1930s period of planned growth on narrow rectangular lots improved by single-family freestanding dwellings. The streets and alleys were laid in a grid-like pattern between the previously established crossroads and major transportation routes such as South Glebe Road, Columbia Pike, and the Arlington County and Fairfax Railway that originally marked the county. The great influx of military and federal personnel during the years of World War II prompted the construction of housing and commercial amenities, thereby establishing New Arlington-Douglas Park as a densely populated residential neighborhood.

Spurred by the vast development by the middle part of the 20th century, apartment buildings and commercial structures developed along the historic routes, depleting the area of many of its mid- to late-19th-century resources. The development of the 1930-1940s, however, remained largely intact to provide a contained residential community, circumscribed by this later growth. The 125 properties recorded tended to exhibit the modest bungalow form with small concentrations of late Victorian Queen Anne-style dwellings. Infill dating from the 1950s, generally in the form of a "Cape Cod," are interspersed throughout the large community, although they were not included in the survey.

Alcova Heights

The neighborhood known today as Alcova Heights was purchased in 1915 from the Young-Gray estates by the Columbia Land Company. In 1921, this company was dissolved, however, and its holdings transferred to the Alcova Improvement Company with Judge Joseph Cloyd Byars as president. A former state senator, Byars subdivided the tract into lots measuring 50 and 100 feet in width, selling each for five cents per square foot. Many of the present property owners in the community purchased their land directly from the Improvement Company, improving it soon after buying the land.

Due to the community's location near the trolley and two major transportation routes -- Columbia Pike and Glebe Road, Alcovia Heights became a popular Washington, DC suburb by the latter part of the 1920s. The residential community is bounded by Glebe Road on the east, Doctors Branch on the west, Columbia Pike on the south, with South 6th Street and the Arlington Hall Station (00-0018) to the north.

A total of 107 properties were documented from the Alcovia Heights community, ranging in date from the 1847 Springhill Farm (000-2017) to the 1945 Arlington United Methodist Church. The majority of the domestic buildings date from 1920-1930. The common form is that of a modest bungalow, predominately constructed of wood frame with Craftsman-style detailing. The buildings tended to be one to one-and-a-half stories in height with full-width front porches.

Arlington Heights

Originally settled by farmers who worked the land themselves or with indentured servants, Arlington Heights was comprised of the vast stretch of rolling farm land included in the Arlington Estate owned by the Custis family. During the Civil War, federal troops occupied the "Arlington Heights across from Washington," which afforded them a protective vista over the nation's capital. Reduced by development, the Arlington Heights community presently is bounded by Arlington Boulevard on the north, Fillmore Street and Walter Reed Drive on the east, Columbia Pike on the south and Glebe Road to the west.

The neighborhood is predominately comprised of freestanding single-family dwellings with garden and high-rise apartments and mixed commercial establishments occupying the perimeters. Seventy-two properties were documented in Arlington Heights, ranging in date from the 1890s to the 1950s. The wood frame Queen Anne and Colonial Revival were noted, as were numerous examples of the Bungalow/Craftsman style in the northern portion of the neighborhood. Later development is scattered with pockets of two-story Colonial Revival brick dwellings concentrated along South 6th Street and the streets branching off to the north and south.

Foxcroft Heights

Like Arlington Heights, the Foxcroft Heights neighborhood was originally part of the vast stretch of farm land included in the Custis family's Arlington estate. In 1861, the property was seized by the government for nonpayment of taxes. In the years following the Civil War, the area to be known as Foxcroft Heights was owned by R. Swallow Brown with John W. Clark and Stevens Lodge as adjoining neighbors.

By the early 1900s, after the land had been conveyed numerous times, the unimproved property became the site of speculative development as construction companies began to improve and develop the area as a residential suburb of Washington, DC. The Central Building Company, owned by the Kibler family, purchased the one-and-a-half acres of land that made up most of what is today known as Foxcroft Heights. Between 1935 and 1940, the property was subdivided for the construction of freestanding single-family dwellings and rowhouses. Simultaneously, the landscape that encompassed the community was rapidly changed by the expansion of nearby government facilities, such as the Navy Annex in the early 1940s and the Pentagon between 1941-1943. With the exception of several parcels, including the area encircled by South Orme, Ode and Oak streets in the southwestern section of the community near Columbia Pike, much of the land has since been developed by the federal government.

The Foxcroft Heights community is located within Neighborhood Service Area G, along the southern boundary of Arlington Cemetery. Bounded by Shirley Highway, the neighborhood is located to the southwest of the Pentagon and northeast of Central Arlington. Eighteen properties were recorded in the community of Foxcroft Heights. The dwellings of this area are virtually identical in form, detailing, and massing. They are front and side gable one-story brick buildings with a variety of porch types. There is an enclave of Tudor Revival rowhouses, constructed of brick, and several 1950s high-rise apartment buildings. All of the properties included in the survey date from 1935.

Central Arlington

As is typically the case with neighborhood communities in Arlington prior to 1900, Central Arlington was a rural community, sparsely settled and devoted largely to farming. The first impetus to growth occurred in 1882 when Henry Louis Holmes and William H. Butler, both respected African-American community leaders, purchased the land west of Fort Meyer. Known as the Butler-Holmes subdivision, the land was subdivided and sold as lots for residential development. Originally a resident of Freedmen's Village, Butler and his brothers relocated to the neighborhood, improving it with substantial freestanding dwellings.¹¹

William H. Butler and Henry Louis Holmes each held public office in the county prior to their real estate development ventures -- Holmes served as Commissioner of Revenue between 1876 and 1903, as well as being one of the first officers of St. John's Baptist Church; Butler served as Superintendent of Roads in 1879 and later as Superintendent of the Poor.¹² Descendants of William H. Butler continue to occupy several of the original dwellings constructed in the Butler-Holmes subdivision along South 2nd Street.¹³ The second home of Dr. Holmes (000-1940), erected in 1918, is located at 2803 South 2nd Street, while the 1879-1889 home of William Butler is located at 2407 South 2nd Street (000-1916).

Despite the subdivision of the lots, the community grew slowly during the latter part of the 19th century. By 1900, however, development was greatly impacted by the establishment of the Washington, Arlington, and Falls Church Electric Railway Company streetcar lines that connected the community to Rosslyn, Georgetown and the District of Columbia. Prior to 1917, the Hunter Trolley Station (000-1923) was established in the subdivision, thus allowing for a more direct connection to the nation's capital. The modest streetcar station is located on South 2nd Street just south of where the Washington, Arlington, and Fairfax Electric Railway line intersected with the trolley line.

Not mentioned on historical maps prior to 1927, the community of Central Arlington was historically part of Arlington Heights. Historically, the area contained the site of Civil War Fort Craig and the Arlington Wireless Station, now the Arlington Naval Radio Station on South Courthouse Road. As labeled on a 1917 map, the northern section of Central Arlington, to the north of South 2nd Street, was known as Penrose. Prior to 1927, this area was the most densely populated and improved neighborhoods of Central Arlington.

Because of the area's easy accessibility by trolley and the location of the station, the neighborhood witnessed the vast development and the construction of a number of single-family dwellings between 1900 and 1930, many of which are still extant. The rural aspect of the community was largely retained prior to the 1930 construction of Arlington Boulevard by open green space, reminiscent of the farming industry that historically sustained the area. This open landscape was further accented by the rural nature of the adjoining Arlington Cemetery. The construction of Arlington Boulevard, in addition to the tremendous development needs of World War II-era government, increased land values and encouraged the erection of many contemporary buildings. Continuing as established in the early part of the 20th century, however, Central Arlington is almost exclusively a single-family community with low-density, multi-family apartments and small commercial enclaves predominately located along South Wise Street, Columbia Pike and Arlington Boulevard.

Presently, Central Arlington is bounded on the north by Arlington Boulevard, Walter Reed Drive/ South Fillmore Street on the west, South 9th Street to the south and South Courthouse Road to the east. Central Arlington is comprised of modest working-class, single-family dwellings, the majority of which were constructed between 1910 and 1960. The streets are generally narrow and organized in a grid pattern. Some notable exceptions are South 6th and South 2nd streets. The width and curvilinear path of South 6th Street is largely due to its location over and along a former streambed, which prior to the late 1940s, ran alongside the dirt road.

The residential neighborhood of Central Arlington is bordered on the main transportation arteries by several large apartment buildings and office complexes. The most notable garden apartment complex in the area is Fillmore Gardens (dating from 1942-1948), located on Walter Reed Drive between South 6th and South 8th streets. Intrusions into the historic fabric includes several winding streets populated by 1960s and 1970s modest ranch-type houses, and scattered enclaves of 1980s townhouse rows.

A total of 107 properties were recorded in the Central Arlington area, dating from the 1870s Butler House to the 1948 Fillmore Gardens Shopping Center. Substantial concentrations of late-19th- and early-20th-century domestic dwellings are found in the vicinity of South 2nd Street. The vast majority of the 20th century buildings are one-and-a-half to two stories in height with Bungalow/Craftsman and Colonial Revival-style detailing.

Barcroft

Barcroft was originally surveyed by George Washington in the mid-18th century as Washington's Forest. George Washington Parke Custis, who eventually inherited the land, established the Arlington Mill on Four Mile Run near Columbia Pike in the early 19th century.

Named the Custis Mill Tract of Washington's Forest, the land was purchased in 1880 by Dr. John Wolverton Barcroft. Barcroft, for whom the community was later renamed, had moved to Virginia in 1849 from New Jersey, settling on Columbia Pike beyond the county line at Holmes Run. A graduate of the Philadelphia Medical College, Dr. Barcroft operated the Arlington Mill until the Civil War when he was forced to relocate to New Jersey. The mill was eventually destroyed by Federal troops after the Second Battle of Bull Run. Having returned to Virginia after the war, Barcroft reconstructed the Arlington Mill, renamed the Barcroft Mill, on the original foundations, thus establishing it as one of the largest mills on the eastern seaboard.¹⁴

Eventually the land was owned by Frank Corbett, whose family had been purchasing land along Columbia Pike since the 1840s. The community of Barcroft evolved from a small subdivided portion of Corbett's 262-acre Cedar Hill Farm that was located on Columbia Pike at Four Mile Run. The subdivided Corbett property originally extended along Columbia Pike from what is currently known as George Mason Drive and South Taylor Street to Fairfax County.¹⁵ The community began to develop beginning about 1892, and the first dwelling was erected on Arlington Avenue by Annie Doremus on the first of two privately purchased lots. Upon the death of Frank Corbett in 1898, his executors sold two additional lots to Edgar Klemroth, who constructed a dwelling in 1900. In 1903, the farm and the unsold subdivided lots were purchased by Abigail G. Fox from the Corbett estate.¹⁶

In 1904, the village of Barcroft was re-surveyed, altering block sizes and changing street names.¹⁷ Together with her son-in-law, developer Stephen P. Wright, Mrs. Fox began to allocate lots intended for residential use. The Barcroft News often contained advertisements for undeveloped lots and houses in Barcroft, available through Stephen Wright.¹⁸ Fox and Wright attempted to attract city inhabitants to the developing suburban village, proclaiming Barcroft as a commuter town with "fresh country air." In 1908, B. F. Perrow, of Remington, Virginia, was retained by Fox to build houses on the subdivided property. Perrow constructed approximately 30 houses, using rock from the local stone quarry to erect the foundations.

As early as 1850 the first steam rail line, the Southern Railway, was constructed in the area with a stop at Columbia Pike for passengers, grain for the mill, and live animals. By the early years of the 20th century, many Barcroft citizens commuted to Washington, DC on the electric railroad along Four Mile Run, known as the Washington and Old Dominion Railroad. This railroad connection proved essential until paved roads offered more convenience for motorized vehicles. The population of Arlington County increased from 4,258 residents in 1890 to 16,040 residents in 1920.¹⁹ The character of the county, originally rural and agricultural, had been transformed to a suburban community. The railroad, in addition to the establishment of a post office in circa 1900, facilitated the growth of Barcroft along Columbia Pike to the north and east. By 1905, the village of Barcroft contained a mill, railroad station, a store, a blacksmith shop, a cattle pen, a stone quarry, a farm implement shop, and approximately twenty residents.²⁰ The community of Barcroft was often the focus of political surveys in the early to middle 20th century, as its population profile was considered to be representative of the nation at large.

Walter O'Hara was one of the most prominent local builders in the Barcroft area, responsible for the construction of several hundred domestic buildings between 1918 and 1952.

The seventy-six domestic properties of Barcroft are predominately wood frame Bungalows dating from the turn of the 20th century to the 1940s. These buildings are one- to one-and-a-half stories in height with the stylistic porches and low lying roofs. A vast number of two-story Colonial Revival-style buildings with side gable roofs were recorded in Barcroft as well. Later development, generally located to the north of Pershing Drive, tends to be of brick construction in the Colonial Revival style in a "Cape Cod" form.

THEME: ARCHITECTURE/COMMUNITY PLANNING

The majority of buildings in the survey area, typically the domestic, were constructed for a particular function and often were influenced by the forms, materials, details, or other features associated with the architectural styles that were currently in vogue. The survey area exhibits architectural detailing drawn from high-style examples commonly found in urban communities which commonly served as laboratories for styles. As these new trends were spread from the cities to the suburbs and to the rural communities, the styles were modified to accommodate smaller resources, utilizing varied materials that typically reduced construction costs.

Characteristically, buildings in a rural context did not consciously attempt to mimic current fashion, but instead provided shelter using the technology of the period. Often referred to as vernacular or folk housing, these rural buildings did, however, incorporate stylistic detailing and popular ornamentation, if only in a diluted state. The ornament was often just a distinguishing characteristic, without necessarily revealing a relationship to the building's function. Similarly, the 20th-century dwellings of suburban residential neighborhoods were often constructed to provide densely populated residential housing that was economically affordable while still in fashion. Typically, form took precedent over style and fashion, which often employed the actual structural materials to serve as architectural ornamentation. This is the case with the Bungalow/Craftsman-style dwellings, detailed with exposed rafters, brick and wood supporting posts, and molded concrete block foundations.

The survey of south Arlington County, which experienced its greatest surge of development and growth during the early part of the 20th century, contains fifteen different styles and forms of buildings. Largely domestic, the buildings' styles range from Gothic Revival to International, with the Bungalow/Craftsman and Colonial Revival styles dominating. Notably, several styles identified during the Phase I survey were not recorded in Phase II. This includes the Prairie style, Shingle style, Late Victorian and Late 19th and 20th century Revivals, and Federal.

Greek Revival Style

The Greek Revival adhered strictly to the Greek orders and systems of proportion and ornament, whereas the previously employed Federal style was derived from the Palladian ideal of ancient Roman design. Modeled on English precedents, the Greek Revival style was imported to America and spread rapidly along the coast and into the frontier. Linked by an educated elite to the ideals of ancient Greek democracy, it became associated with the young democratic government and was considered a natural choice for civic monuments. As a stylistic influence, the Greek Revival filtered down to even the most modest of rural farmhouses. Grander houses generally featured a columned portico supporting a triangular pediment -- as on a Greek temple. Country builders accomplished the same effect simply by turning the gable end of a house to the street, boxing in the gable with a triangular raking cornice, adding pilasters to the corners, and painting the building a pristine white.²¹

The Greek Revival style, extending from 1825 to 1860, was extremely popular in Arlington County during the Antebellum period, although few examples are extant. Five domestic illustrations of the style were noted, typically dating from the latter part of the 19th century, however.

One of the oldest domestic resources documented, Springhill Farm (000-2017), exhibits much of the high-style detailing and form associated with the Greek Revival style. This includes the side-passage plan, steeply pitched side gable roof, standardized window openings, and heavy cornice with returns. Although this original circa 1847 building has been encompassed within a Classical Revival-style 1920s addition, it retains much of its fine Greek Revival detailing.

More vernacular interpretations of the style are the unassuming one-and-a-half-story dwellings at 1533 South 11th Street (000-1658) and the house at 1006 South Queen Street (000-1653). Dating from the latter part of the 19th century, these wood frame buildings originally had narrow shot-gun plans that have been substantially altered. Yet, the buildings retain the low-pitched front gable roofs and molded lintel caps indicative of the style.

In form, the dwelling at 1703 South Oakland Street (000-1783) is an excellent illustration of the Greek Revival style. The building has a central-passage plan, extending three bays in width and two bays deep. It has the stylistic low-pitched roof and overhanging ogee-molded cornice with returns. The wood frame building is a late example of the style, dating from the 1890s.

Gothic Revival Style

The Gothic Revival was the first of the Victorian-era styles to challenge the symmetry and ordered reason of Classicism. Brooding and romantic, it was influenced by the Picturesque Movement, with vaulted ceilings, battlements, lancet-arched windows, and tracery all suggesting the mysterious architectural vocabulary of a distant past. Popular in the 1830s and 1840s, the Gothic Revival was well suited to the dark brownstone increasingly used for the urban rowhouse, but it was most commonly applied to the large country "villa" and to the small cottage, the first house type in America designed specifically for the middle class. The domestic structures constructed during this period were influenced by architectural styles published in house plan books, such as Alexander Jackson Davis's Rural Residences published in 1832 and Andrew Jackson Downing's Cottage Residences in 1842. The most common style of the middle to late 19th century, the Gothic Revival style, dominated rural communities as it was compatible with the natural landscape. The style was identified by its steeply pitched roof, decorative bargeboard, and one-story porches with flattened Gothic arches. The influences of the Gothic Revival style, particularly the steeply pitched roof and pointed arches, continued until the end of the 19th century.

Within the survey area, four buildings were found to exhibit the Gothic Revival style, three domestic and one church. Modest in detail when compared with the traditional Gothic Revival-style buildings, the dwelling at 4812 South 18th Street (000-2250) is a very late example of the style, dating from the 1890s. Although altered, the two-story building retains its symmetrical plan and steeply pitched cross gable roof. Also significantly altered, the Symond's House (000-1831) and Sunnydale Farm (000-1327) exhibit the same steeply pitched cross gable roofs. All of the dwellings have central passage plans and full-width front porches. The Blessed Vietnamese Martyrs Church at 915 South Wakefield Street (000-2242) also exhibits the architectural trends of the Gothic Revival style with its lancet-arched windows.

Italianate Style

Well represented in pattern books, the Italianate style emerged in the 1830s along with the Gothic Revival and eventually proved to be even more popular, lasting into the 1870s. With square towers, asymmetrical plans, broad roofs, and generous verandahs, the rambling Italianate houses that began to appear in both the suburbs and the countryside were rather free and highly romanticized interpretations of the villas of Tuscany, Umbria, and Lombardy. During the mid-1800s, the Italianate style was enthusiastically adapted for urban rowhouse architecture and reached its zenith in the brownstone-fronted rowhouses of New York City, characterized by ornate door and window designs, weighty bracketed cornices, and high stoops with robust cast-iron stair rails.²²

The survey recorded three Italianate-style buildings, all of which are domestic in use. One of the best examples of the style is the Schaaf House (000-2135) at 5729 South 2nd Street. Constructed in 1880, the wood frame house has a central-passage plan with a prominent square entry tower at the facade. Characteristic of an Italian villa, the tower has the archetypal narrow paired window openings, front gable roof, and rafter ends emulating brackets. The two-and-a-half-story dwelling has a full-width front porch finished with a half-hipped roof supported by chamfered posts. The porch is accentuated by scrolled brackets and rafter ends.

²² Rachel Carley, The Visual Dictionary of American Domestic Architecture. (New York, NY: Henry Holt and Company, 1994), p. 143.

The two other examples include the house at 1102 South Queen Street (000-1651) and the house at 2415 South 1st Street (000-1932). The two-story house at 1102 South Queen Street has been substantially altered by stone-like cladding, aluminum siding, and new roofing and cornice materials; yet the Italianate form traditionally associated with urban rowhouses is clearly evident. The abandoned house at 2415 South 1st Street is one of the most significant resources identified in the survey, dating from the middle part of the 19th century. The brick building, now reoriented by the laying of the roads, displays the archetypal front gable roof, segmentally arched openings, and side-passage plan.

Italian Renaissance Style

The Italian Renaissance style, directly inspired by the great Renaissance houses of Italy, was one of the most popular of the Beaux Arts design modes, lasting from the late 1800s until the 1920s. While the Victorian Italianate was essentially a loose interpretation of Italian architecture, drawn primarily from pattern books, the Italian Renaissance style took a much more academic approach, with design features often copied directly from actual Renaissance landmarks. Roman, Florentine, and Venetian prototypes -- ducal palazzi or country villas -- were transformed into American "palaces," primarily in cities such as New York and fashionable resorts like Newport, Rhode Island.²³

²³ Carley, p. 179.

A single resource was identified in the survey of south Arlington County that exhibited the fashionable Italian Renaissance style -- the former domestic building located at the VDOT Complex (000-1990) on Columbia Pike. Historically the main dwelling of a poultry farm, the building was constructed circa 1915. Distinctive stylistic elements include the broad overhanging eaves, accentuated lintels and surrounds, and semi-circular arched openings. It is covered by the typical low-pitched hipped roof and has brick stringcourses, arched porch recesses, and paired casement windows.

Queen Anne Style

Among the attractions generating considerable interest at the 1876 Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia were several English buildings designed in the Queen Anne style, which would prove to be widely influential in America from the 1870s until the turn of the century. The style was identified with the Scottish-born architect Richard Norman Shaw and his followers, whose domestic work in England was a tremendously free and eclectic hybrid of forms drawn from a range of sources, including Classical, Tudor, and Flemish architecture. The Queen Anne style dismissed the impractical Gothic by emphasizing human scale and domestic comforts. Its facades showed a great variety, featuring projecting oriels, bay windows, and odd rooflines. It was also rich in texture, with cut and molded brick, terracotta, and ornamental plaster. The open, asymmetrical plan centered around a "great hall" with an enormous fireplace and cozy built-in inglenooks.

In America, the style found an exuberant expression in wood, and frequently incorporated Classical columns and decorative motifs borrowed from our own colonial architecture. The Queen Anne style was favored for everything from rowhouses to sprawling seaside retreats, whose designs frequently came from pattern books. All were resplendent in patterned shingles, spindles, brackets, and curlicue cutouts; many boasted ample verandahs, turrets, and sleeping porches.²⁴

Fifty-seven Queen Anne-style resources were identified in the survey area, all domestic resources. Examples of the style are the house at 1301 South Monroe Street (000-1733), the house at 1541 South 11th Street (000-1655), the Butler House at 2407 South 2nd Street (000-1916), the Gables at 6 South Kensington Street (000-2130), and the Walter Ker Handy House at 4712 South 8th Street (000-2256). This style was predominately confined to the neighborhoods of Barcroft, New Arlington/Douglas Park, Central Arlington, and Glen Carlyn, all of which are neighborhoods that developed at the end of the 19th century along streetcar and/or railroad lines that extended from Washington, DC.

Two of the most ornate, high-style examples of the Queen Anne style noted in the survey were the King-Hilder House (000-2136) and the Jones-Boyd House (000-2148). Designed with an L-shaped plan, the King-Hilder House at 5501 South 3rd Street was constructed in 1891 by Major William King. Stylistic detailing includes the fancy-turned posts and sawn balustrade, steeply pitched multiple gables, single and paired elongated window openings, and scrolled sawn brackets.

The Jones-Boyd House at 5740 Arlington Boulevard was constructed by Walter Jones at the end of the 19th century. Significant as the second domestic building erected in the newly founded community of Glen Carlyn, the Jones-Boyd House has an ornate wrap-around porch with fancy-turned posts, brackets, and thin balusters. The main block of the building is covered by a steeply pitched hip roof that is obscured by the imposing front gable pediments. The pediments have paired window openings, raked cornices, and fish-scale shingles. The walls of the building are asymmetrically pierced by large 1/1 double-hung, wood sash windows that vary in width. The high-style dwelling was strategically sited on a corner lot that allows the eccentric embellishments to be studied from various angles.

Colonial Revival Style

Following on the heels of America's Centennial celebrations in 1876, the Colonial Revival style emerged in the early 1880s. The style, which borrowed heavily from early American architecture -- particularly Georgian and Federal buildings -- was largely an outgrowth of a new nationwide pride in the past and a rapidly growing interest in historic preservation. In the early phase, the Colonial Revival style remained the exclusive domain of fashionable architectural firms and was favored for the large residences of wealthy clients. Designs incorporated characteristic features of Colonial buildings, including Palladian windows, gambrel roofs, pedimented porticoes, columns, and Classical detailing such as swags and urns, and crisp white trim. This new building type was larger, however, than its historic counterpart, with details also enlarged and plans laid out on a grandiose scale.

With the 20th century came a related interest in a variety of period styles, particularly the Colonial Revival style. As the style spread to the suburbs, it became more conservative in design and scale, and was often applied to modest residences. By the 1940s, the style was widespread, lasting to the present.

Within the survey area, 431 buildings have features that are largely associated with the Colonial Revival style. Colonial Revival was the most dominant style documented, gaining popularity by the 1930s. Identifying features of the style commonly found in the area include accentuated main entry doors, symmetrically balanced facades, single and paired double-hung sash windows, and side gable or gambrel roofs.

The larger examples are typically more detailed with quoins, corbeled brick chimneys, and fanlights. An excellent example is the freestanding five-course American bond brick dwelling at 1707 South Arlington Ridge Road (000-1434). The imposing building has a central-passage plan with Palladian-like windows flanking the main entry opening. Characteristic of the style, the main entry has a multi-light fanlight, heavily molded surrounds, and balustraded portico. The one-story portico has a semi-circular form with a flat roof supported by tapered Tuscan columns. The dominating side gable roof is pierced by three symmetrically placed front gable dormers and accentuated by the shallow boxed cornice with plain frieze.

A total of twenty of the Colonial Revival-style dwellings identified in this survey have gambrel roofs with a continuous shed-roof dormer. The dwelling at 2611 South Lynn Street (000-1566) exhibits the typical detailing of the style, including a pedimented entrance hood, an interior end brick chimney, and a steeply pitched gambrel roof that provides a full second story of floor space. Known as Dutch Colonial Revival, the dwellings are generally three bays wide, two bays deep with a central-passage plan augmented by rear additions.

Dating from the 1930s and 1940s, the one-and-a-half-story "Cape Cod" cottages exhibit the familiar detailing and form of the Colonial Revival style. This form provided an adequate and affordable housing mode for the massive population of working and middle class residents of Arlington County, while mimicking the fashionable style of the period. A popular form found throughout the survey area, the buildings are typically constructed of brick with side gable roofs and front gable dormers. The examples identified in Arlington County are typically three bays wide, two bays deep, with a central-passage plan. Detailing includes the flat door surrounds with shallow Tuscan pilasters supporting a slightly projecting entablature, a corbeled brick cornice on the facade, and rectangular 6/6 double-hung wood sash windows with brick sills.

A restricted variation of the Colonial Revival style lent itself well to the multiple-family twin buildings constructed in the 1930s-1940s in Aurora Highlands and the southern portion of Arlington Ridge. Two-and-a-half stories in height, the twin dwellings were constructed of brick with side gable roofs. As seen along South 26th and High streets (000-1531 and 000-1629), the facades are detailed with projecting front gable porticoes and boxed cornices.

Classical Revival Style

The Classical Revival was based on the Neoclassical architecture of 18th-century France and England. Popular in America between the 1890s and 1950s, the fashion favored the French Neoclassical, which provided a striking alternative to the ostentatious sculptural ornament associated with the Beaux Arts style. By contrast, the style was subdued and dignified, although equally monumental in scale. Facades were markedly symmetrical and punctuated by rhythmic rows of columns, windows and entry doors. A grand two-story portico often emphasized the centrality of the design.

Seven such examples were identified in the survey of Arlington County. Notable stylistic details noted during the survey include the end chimneys, symmetrical plan, and full-height entry porticoes. As originally designed, the entry portico of the house at 1706 South Arlington Ridge Road (000-1497) has a semi-circular shaped portico with Tuscan columns and pilasters. The flat roof of the portico is accentuated by the boxed cornice and wide frieze. The Classical Revival style is also demonstrated in the semi-circular-arched window openings of the front gable dormers.

The Greek Revival-style Springhill Farm (000-2017) was enlarged in the 1920s by a side addition that reoriented the main entry to the north. This elevation was then distinctively detailed with a two-story front-gable pedimented portico. The tympanum is clad with siding and edged with a raking cornice. Full-height Tuscan columns with fluting support the projecting portico. The illusion of an upper story on the portico is created by the metal balustrade at the second-story opening of the main block.

Tudor Revival Style

The Tudor Revival style of the late 19th and early 20th centuries was derived primarily from English Renaissance buildings of the 16th and 17th centuries, including those of the Elizabethan and Jacobean periods. These rambling, asymmetrically-massed mansions typically featured steeply pitched gables, decorative -- rather than structural -- half-timbering, and long rows of casement windows. By the early 20th century, the Tudor Revival style was adapted to the middle-class suburban house and eventually became especially popular for the affordable small houses of the 1920s and 1930s.

As the third most popular style noted in the survey for the second year, the Tudor Revival style was identified sixty-five times. These dwellings exhibit multi-gabled roofs; prominent brick chimneys typically attached to the facade; and steeply pitched roofs. The typical modest suburban version at 2321 South Joyce Street (000-1495) has a projecting entry portico, paired windows, and is constructed of brick with stone detailing. Note the steeply pitched gable ends with raking cornices on the north elevation that outline the main block of the building and the one-story wing.

One of the most outstanding examples in the survey area, 2336 South Nash Street (000-1446), has imposing front gables, paired and triple windows, and half-timbering. The two-story building is clad with random laid stone with a multi-colored slate tile side gable roof.

Bungalow/Craftsman Style

The first thirty years of the 1900s witnessed a building boom for small single- and two-family houses, along with the detached "auto barn," or garage. This growth was spurred by a social movement dedicated to the improvement of housing, as well as another development on the American scene -- the suburb. In 1900, more than 8,000 cars were on the road; just fifteen years later the number was well over two million. This increased mobility, along with improved railroads, created a demand for affordable housing within reach of the city.

Magazines led the way in introducing affordable housing to the newly mobile consumers. Among the most influential was Ladies Home Journal, which around 1900 published designs for small model homes -- often in chalet and period styles -- complete with plans for prefabricated frames, specifications for fireproofing, and such novel conveniences as electricity, plumbing, and gas ranges. The Craftsman was responsible for the widespread popularity of the Craftsman bungalow, a typically snug one-an-a-half-story house with a wide overhanging roof, a deep, wide entry porch, and simple interiors with built-in amenities such as cupboards and cozy inglenooks. For a few dollars a reader could purchase working plans for a house that could be built for as little as $1,000. Ready-to-build houses could also be bought by mail-order from enterprises such as Sears, Roebuck and Company which would deliver the crated materials, fixtures, and assembly instructions for an entire house to the nearest railroad station.²⁵

²⁵ Carley, p. 212; For a more detailed report on the mail-order dwellings, refer to the Domestic Theme.

The second most popular style and building form identified in the survey area is the Bungalow/Craftsman, with a total of 370 buildings out of 1015 surveyed (nearly 37%). These Bungalow/Craftsman-style buildings typically have low-pitched gable roofs, wide unenclosed overhanging eaves, and exposed roof rafters, decorative false beams under the eaves, and full-width front porches.

Overwhelmingly, the Bungalow forms documented in the survey have traditional Craftsman-style detailing such as exposed rafter ends, paired and triple windows, staggered wood shingles, and inset porches supported by tapered square columns set upon brick or concrete block posts. Yet, a significant number of Craftsman-style dwellings with irregular, non-bungalowoid plans were recorded.

Influence of the Craftsman style, especially in easily replaceable elements such as porches, is evident throughout the county. The Doremus-Marye House at 902 South Buchanan Street (000-2247) historically had a porch with a shed roof that wrapped around the southeast corner of the building. Set upon a brick pier foundation, the porch was ornamented with thin square posts and spindlework. The Craftsman trend prompted the replacement of the original posts with brick pier bases supporting tapered square columns.

Of particular note is the much altered bungalow at 4708 South 8th Street (000-2257), which dates from 1928. The front entry porch features an ornate concrete balustrade, which is complemented by the low boundary wall surrounding the property. The detailing of the balustrade and wall recall the work of John Joseph Early, a prominent local craftsman who developed a unique way of mixing and coloring concrete that allowed the material to be worked in a sculptural way. Early (born 1881) was responsible for the now-razed Arlington Trust Company Building in Rosslyn, the mosaic tiles at the reptile house of the National Zoo, Meridian Hill Park in Washington, DC, and the walks and stairs at the Iwo Jima Memorial.

Mission/Spanish Colonial Revival Style

Spanish-inspired houses began appearing at the turn of the century in the form of the Mission style, which reflected a loose adaptation of features often found on Spanish Colonial mission buildings. Features such as shaped parapets and quatrefoil windows were often incorporated. In 1915, the California-Pacific Exposition opened in San Diego to inaugurate the Panama Canal. One of the great sites of the fair was the California pavilion: a romantic, slightly exotic building designed in a freely interpreted Spanish Colonial style by the fashionable architect Bertram Grosvenor Goodhue. Both the exposition and Goodhue did much to promote this more academic and sophisticated interpretation, which borrowed from a broad vocabulary of Moorish, Byzantine, and Renaissance detailing, often based on actual prototypes in Spain. In vogue into the 1930s, the Spanish Colonial Revival was found primarily in the Southwest, California, and fashionable Florida resorts.²⁶

A total of three Mission/Spanish Colonial Revival-style buildings were identified, all of which were historically domestic. Typically asymmetrical in plan, the dwellings are modest in size, generally one-and-a-half to two stories in height. The examples are the dwelling at 1224 South Oakcrest Road (000-1274), the house at 2610 South Lynn Street (000-1568), and the former dwelling at 1036 South Highland Street (000-1724).

The dwelling at 1224 South Oakcrest Road (000-1274) is an example of the Spanish Eclectic form, a variation of this style. The three-bay-wide building has a hip roof, a form common in only about 10% of all Mission/Spanish Colonial Revival-style buildings. Modest in detail, it has smooth wall surfaces, replacement double-hung windows, regularly laid Spanish tile roofing, and a recessed main entry opening.

²⁶ Carley, p. 196.

Art Deco Style

The term "Art Deco" derives from the title of a 1925 Paris design fair, called the Exposition Internationale des Arts Decoratifs et Industriels Modernes, where numerous rooms in the style were on display. Art Deco had begun to appear in Europe before World War I. It was a curious blend of Modernism, history, and fantasy, influenced by the speed-infused aesthetic of the Italian Futurists and the mystical images of Mayan, Assyrian, and Moorish cultures. These, in turn, were expressed by the richest of materials: marble, colored terrazzo, chrome, and ebony.

Adopted in America primarily in the 1930s, the Art Deco style was seldom used for single-family houses, but reached its apogee in New York, Los Angeles, and Miami, primarily in apartment buildings and city skyscrapers, which seemed best suited to this style of applied, concentrated decorations. The style is noted for its smooth wall surfaces, usually clad with stucco, zigzags, chevrons, and other stylized and geometric motifs.²⁷

Six examples of the Art Deco style were documented, none of which were domestic. Building types recorded are the Westmont Shopping Center (000-2207), Arlington Theater (000-2214), the Young Chow Restaurant (000-1645), the Arlington Hardware Building (000-2203), the Acme Supermarket (000-1643), and the Hoffman-Boston School (000-1665).

²⁷ Carley, p. 228.

One of the best intact examples is the Acme Supermarket, now commonly known as the 7-Eleven Convenience Store, at 426 South 23rd Street. The buff colored brick building is rectangular in plan with large show windows, single-course brick stringcourses with perpendicular designs, and a limestone encircled entry surround. This surround is composed of a low-pitched segmental arch of limestone, embossed with urns and floral motifs.

Moderne Style

Making a short appearance in America in the 1930s, the smooth-surfaced, flat-roofed Moderne-style house was an essay in streamlined geometry and stripped ornament except for an occasional frieze of horizontal grooves. Such streamlining was also reflected in the curving wall planes. It expressed not only economy of line, but also a fascination with the aerodynamics of speed and the romance of the locomotive, airplane, and the ocean liner. In domestic architecture, the Moderne style was used primarily for small, single-family houses, found in residential area of small cities, in suburbs, and in seaside communities.

Just four resources were identified that exhibit the Moderne style of architecture -- the house at 919 South Monroe Street (000-2123), the Fillmore Gardens Shopping Center at 2601 Columbia Pike (000-2195), the commercial building at 919-927 South Walter Reed Drive (000-2199), and the St. Coletta Thrift Store at 2929 Columbia Pike (000-2216).

As the only domestic dwelling exhibiting this style, the house at 919 South Monroe Street is detailed with the identifying smooth wall surfaces, several flat roofs, ribbon windows, and curved corners. The north corner of the building is curved, marking the main entry of the building which has few openings. Constructed between 1936 and 1945 as indicated by historic maps, the building follows the streamlined tradition of utilizing the building materials as ornamentation and thus, does not have any applied detailing.

International Style

In 1932, Alfred Barr, Jr., the director of the museum of Modern Art in New York, mounted a ground breaking show called "Modern Architecture: International Exhibition," organized by the American architect Philip Johnson and architectural historian Henry-Russell Hitchcock. That exhibition gave the Modernist movement in Europe and the United States its name. The phrase "less is more" is often invoked to explain the International style, which rejected all historical stylistic references in favor of clean, volumetric forms completely devoid of applied pattern, texture, and "superfluous" ornament. This mode of building, in which each element was defined as clearly as possible, was dependent on industrial technology. The use of steel and concrete as structural elements made the load-bearing wall unnecessary and encouraged the use of large expanses of glass. Filled with light, interiors were opened up and fitted with simple, often built-in furniture to keep the space flowing and free of clutter.²⁸

Three domestic International style resources were recorded -- the Wythe House at 1325 South 23rd Street (000-1435), the house at 4220 South 16th Street (000-1816), and the house at 4029 South 8th Street (000-2164). One of the best illustrations of the style is the Wythe House, constructed in 1936 for George Wythe of the Wythe Candy Company by builder C.R. Matheny. The avant-garde building has a flat roof with a variety of levels, glass-block walls, ribbon windows, and smooth wall planes.

Modern Movement

Beginning in the 1920s, traditional and new architectural trends were the subject of experiments, often melding the historic with the fashionable. Remarkably, fifteen examples of this modern movement were identified, thirteen of which were single dwellings and two commercial buildings. Excellent innovations of the trend include the house at 1030 South 26th Street (000-1299), the house at 1400 South 20th Street (000-1401), the house at 911 South 26th Place (000-1519), and the store at 513-515 South 23rd Street (000-1641).

²⁸ Carley, p. 224.

As seen at 2333 South Nash Street (000-1455), the building has a central-passage, double-pile form covered by a side gable roof. Yet, the streamline, "less is more" modern aesthetic here influences the ornament. The building also exhibits a staggered roofline, short brick banding, glass-block windows, and recessed main entry opening.

Other Styles

The building types that did not conform to a particular style were designated as "Other." This occurred forty-five times in the survey area and largely included domestic dwellings that were one-and-a-half stories in height. The most prevalent form was the L-shaped dwelling with a cut-away front porch. Generally without ornamentation, these buildings were constructed during the housing boom of the World War I to World War II Period (1917-1945) and the New Dominion Period (1945-present). The lack of detailing and grand form allowed for quick inexpensive construction using readily-available materials.

Yet, this trend was not the rule. The Shepherd House at 5527 South 3rd Street (000-2134) was constructed between 1914 and 1925 by a property owner with a particular interest in church architecture and poured concrete. Consequently, the dwelling exhibits a variety of rooflines, window forms, and cladding.

Many of the domestic examples, and several of the commercial buildings like the Arlington Post Office (000-2197) which is now the Ski Chalet, did not conform to any style because the original structure had been severely altered, losing or obscuring the original forms and details.

THEME: GOVERNMENT/LAW/POLITICAL

RESOURCE TYPES: Public Administrative and Service Buildings

Originally the rural portion of the ten-square-mile parcel of land surveyed in 1791 as the nation's capital, Arlington County was known as "Alexandria County of the District of Columbia," which included what is now the county and part of neighboring Alexandria. Returned in 1846 to the Commonwealth of Virginia by the US Congress, Arlington County officially separated from the City of Alexandria in 1870. Adopting the name Arlington County in 1920, the community began its greatest phase of development.

By the 1920s, the character of the county had dramatically changed with rapid subdivision and development of suburbs such as Ballston, Cherrydale, and Barcroft. This suburban development was coupled by the construction of government-supported programs such as fire stations and post offices. Three such buildings were recorded in the survey -- Arlington Fire Department Number 5 (000-1646), Arlington Volunteer Fire Department Number 1 (000-1690), and the Arlington Post Office (000-2197). Unfortunately, none of these buildings continues to function as a government facility.

A fire department was organized in 1924 in what was then the Virginia Highlands portion of the Jefferson Magisterial district, now Aurora Highlands. The first firehouse in this area was located in the 800 block of South 23rd Street in a temporary building. In 1928, the first purpose-built station was constructed at 507 South 23rd Street. The brick building, laid in six-course American bond, has a L-shaped plan with a three-bay-wide facade.

Another volunteer fire department was organized in the Columbia Pike-Glebe Road area in 1923. The department established numerous fire stations throughout the area, including the building at 2926 Columbia Pike. In 1930, the present Arlington Volunteer Fire Department, Number 1 was constructed at 1041 South Edgewood Street. The one-story brick building is a good example of the commercial/governmental architecture being constructed during the 1920s and 1930s with function determining form. The altered building has three double-wide garage openings with roll-up doors and a single entry opening.

The Arlington Post Office building is located at 2704 Columbia Pike, a significant commercial corridor of Columbia Heights that developed during the 1920s and 1930s. According to the permit records, the building was large enough to support commercial stores in addition to the post office. Traditionally vernacular in design, the building originally had storefront windows, numerous entry openings, and a flat roof with a parapet. The building was substantially altered on the exterior and interior, serving now as a single commercial store.

RESOURCE TYPES: Rail-related Buildings

While street railways within the limits of the downtown core of Washington were prevented from adopting the most efficient new trolley technology because of congressional legislation, no such limitation was placed on suburban lines that operated beyond the confines of Florida Avenue. The financial engine driving most of the new suburban rail lines was land development and community growth. Unlike the earliest railways, which were expected to produce profits by providing transportation in heavily settled areas, but in a similar fashion to the second generation of horsecar lines, the new generation of railways was the creation of developers who realized that good transportation was the key to opening up new areas of the District of Columbia and nearby Maryland and Virginia to residential development. The railways themselves were generally not expected to be profitable, as initially many of their routes were through vacant land. In a number of cases, amusement parks or other recreational facilities were erected at the cost of the railway company as attractions to draw people out of the city and past the newly subdivided land.

By the turn of the 20th century, Washington had 190 miles of streetcar track. These tracks were focused in the downtown business districts, connecting selected suburban areas in Maryland and Virginia to the nation's capital. Washington's street railways were consolidated into two lines with a number of independent railway lines operating and expanding in the Maryland and Virginia suburbs. Often their operations were linked with the Washington lines, having been chartered in the 1890s as real estate ventures. The years before World War I brought some route extensions and improvements in and around Washington, although nothing that compared with the building frenzy of the last years of the 19th century. This period also brought the first intimations of the competition that eventually led to the demise of the streetcar -- the automobile.

Presently a dwelling, the building at 2312 South 2nd Street (000-1923) was originally constructed at the turn of the 20th century as the Hunter Trolley Station for the Washington-Virginia Company's streetcar line. The line traveled from Rosslyn to the community of Nauck. Noted as Penrose on historic maps of the 1910s, the community in which the trolley stop was constructed developed as a suburb of Washington, DC. This clustered development was predominately caused by the trolley line and the location of the station at 2312 South 2nd Street. The building's footprint echoes the path of the streetcar rails that ran diagonally from northeast to northwest

With the increase of automobile travel and the demise of the trolley lines, the building was rehabilitated for use as a delicatessen. Known as Finklestein's, the two-story building served the crossroads community until the 1970s. Largely devoid of applied ornament, the building was rehabilitated a second time as a single-family dwelling.

THEME: SUBSISTENCE/AGRICULTURE
RESOURCE TYPES: Farmsteads

Historically, farming and agriculture have been one of the most important industries in Arlington County, playing a significant role in defining its character throughout the 19th century. While no agricultural-related resources such as barns, chicken houses, and agricultural fields were recorded during the survey, three properties were documented as being historically associated with the Subsistence/Agriculture Theme. These include Sunnysdale Farm (000-1327), the Kollmeyer-Corbett House (000-1765), and the central Control Building of the Virginia Department of Transportation [VDOT] (000-1990).

The properties known as Sunnysdale Farm and the Kollmeyer-Corbett House respectively contain the main dwelling and overseer's house of an antebellum plantation. As discussed in the Domestic Theme, the buildings are the only extant remnants of the farmsteads documented in the survey.

Dating from the early part of the 20th century is the Central Control Building of VDOT at 1440 Columbia Pike. The property was listed as a poultry farm on historic maps, consisting of a main dwelling and numerous rectangular chicken houses, although little more is known about the property. It was subsequently purchased by the Virginia Department of Transportation, which razed several of the poultry-associated structures. Extant buildings noted on the historic maps are the main dwelling, designed in the Italian Renaissance style, and the rectangular brick building presently used as a garage.

RESEARCH DESIGN

Objectives

The goal of the multi-phase project was to gather and evaluate information about the historic properties and their resources located within the Neighborhood Service Areas F, G, and H, and selected Target Areas in the southern portion of Arlington County in an effort to more fully comprehend and support their contribution to the County's heritage. The project was intended to: 1) synthesize and complete documentation of previously identified historic properties into a computerized database format; 2) collect additional information on and survey previously unidentified or unevaluated historic properties and potential historic districts; and 3) heighten public awareness about historic resources in Arlington County to encourage citizen appreciation of their history.

Scope of Work

The project was organized into basic tasks:

- 1) the survey and documentation to the reconnaissance level of approximately 1015 historic resources. Phase I included the identification and survey of 761 resources within Neighborhood Service Area H and the Target Areas of Arna Valley, Nauck, and Columbia Heights West. Phase II completed the survey of Neighborhood Service Areas H and G, Glen Carlyn, and a portion of the Barcroft neighborhood community, all to the 1936 date of construction as based on historic maps and one-site survey; and
- 2) the identification of potential historic districts and individual eligible properties for listing on the Virginia Landmarks Register and the National Register of Historic Places.

Methodology

Approach

Tracerics approached this project as a coordinated effort of experienced professional architectural historians working with the Department of Community Planning, Housing and Development and the Virginia Department of Historic Resources (VDHR) in an effort to produce a cost effective survey that would meet VDHR's high standards, as well as provide information needed to Arlington County.

This was accomplished by working closely with Arlington County and its representatives to identify important architectural resources; by taking full advantage of the Integrated Preservation Software database (IPS) to document and analyze historic properties; by understanding the history and geography to insure that selected cultural resources accurately illustrate the County's historic context through the best-preserved and least-altered examples as subsumed under VDHR's eighteen historic context themes; by utilizing years of sound survey experience to ensure an efficient effort; by employing a management methodology that is designed to result in an on-time performance; and by maximizing the potential of an experienced staff.

To achieve the desired products, Tracerics organized a team with the credentials, skills, and successful experience to do the work. The team was composed of four members: a Project Manager/Senior Architectural Historian and three Architectural Historian/Surveyors. The Project Manager/Senior Architectural Historian managed the administration of the survey project, directed the tasks and was responsible for preparing the Final Survey Report. She also functioned as the primary architectural historian, working with the team to evaluate the resources based on the historic context prepared in Phase I. Additionally, the Senior Architectural Historian was responsible for conducting the work involving the assessment of potential historic districts, including the windshield survey, brief historic overview, and preparation of preliminary recommendations regarding these areas. The Architectural Historian/Surveyors managed the information on previously recorded resources -- synthesizing, consolidating, undertaking data entry, located the properties and resources, and updated records as appropriate. They worked together in the field, surveying and documenting resources that met the survey criteria.

Basic to the methodology was the determination of a criteria for selecting properties to be surveyed using VDHR standards, historic themes, and requirements. This was a team effort that allowed on-site decision-making. A system was established to select properties for survey by synthesizing the VDHR standards, the eighteen VDHR historic context themes, the basic historic context outline, and VDHR contractual requirements. Next, a plan was developed for managing the information on the previously recorded properties, for updating records as necessary, and for identifying and surveying 1000 new resources for survey at the Reconnaissance Level.

The recordation of the properties to VDHR standards ensured the successful completion of the contract. Implementing the Survey Design, 1015 resources were surveyed to a Reconnaissance Level. All previously recorded properties were located and information brought up to a standard equal to that employed for the new identified resources.

Each Reconnaissance Level Survey Form recorded a single property, including its primary and secondary resources. Each completed form for resources that contained a contributing primary resource included a detailed physical description of that primary resource as well as a brief description of the secondary resources on the property. It also included a brief evaluation of the property as an entity, placing it in its local historical and architectural context. All forms were accompanied by labeled, black-and-white photographs that document the resource. The photographic documentation included a range of two to five views, with an average of four views of the primary resource and a minimum of one photograph per contributing secondary resource or group of secondary resources if located close together. The photographs sufficiently illustrate the architectural character of the primary resource: at least one photograph was taken at close range. A simple site plan sketch of the property indicating the relationship between primary and secondary resources was completed for each surveyed property. The site plans were prepared neatly in pencil on graph paper. The site plan sketch included the main road and any significant natural features. A copy of the relevant section of the USGS Quadrangle map was submitted with each form.

Representative examples of cultural resources over fifty years old were selected for recordation using our understanding of the history of Arlington County and related architecture. With assistance from the VDHR staff and the Department of Community Planning, Housing and Development of Arlington County, survey priorities were established. Preference was given to those properties within sections of the county identified as the Neighborhood Service Areas F, G and H. Efforts were made to identify the best-preserved and least-altered examples of various resource types subsumed under the eighteen VDHR historic themes. Special attention was paid to early outbuildings and structures, significant buildings in poor condition or threatened by imminent destruction, resources related to ethnic minority cultures, pre-1860 resources, including outbuildings and farm structures, previously surveyed properties that warranted updated or additional information, and significant buildings that may be affected by transportation network improvements (i.e. road or railroad construction). All properties with primary resources more than fifty years of age were surveyed.

To summarize, Tracerics approached this project with a commitment to understanding the historic context and development of modern Arlington County before we began the survey, with a sound background in IPS, with a thorough understanding of VDHR's survey requirements, with knowledge of Virginia architecture and its related resources, and with a commitment to preparing a survey that will take advantage of the talents and experience of our staff.

Work Plan

Implementation of the proposed work was based on an incremental process as outlined in the following seven task descriptions.

- | | |
|---------|---|
| TASK 1: | Project Organization and Management |
| TASK 2: | Survey Design (including Initial Public Presentation) |
| TASK 3: | Survey |
| TASK 4: | IPS |
| TASK 5: | Evaluation of Properties |
| TASK 6: | Architectural Survey Report |
| TASK 7: | Project Completion |

TASK 1: PROJECT ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT

Project organization consisted of the establishment of a work schedule, coordination of the team members and the County staff, establishment of work assignments, arrangement for the necessary materials to undertake the work tasks, and maintenance of the project schedule.

The project manager, largely responsible for organization and management, functioned as liaison between Arlington County, the Department of Historic Resources, and the project team. Activities included regular monitoring of the project's progress, preparation of the monthly progress reports, problem-solving in conjunction with DHR and project staff, and attendance at required progress meetings with the County and DHR representatives.

The project was managed through a system of task-oriented hierarchy. Incremental monitoring was combined with milestone review indicated as "results" for each task listed in the work plan. The monthly progress reports recorded milestone completion for DHR review.

TASK 2: SURVEY DESIGN

Prior to beginning field work, all existing materials relevant to Arlington County contained within the VDHR archives were reviewed. Materials contained within the County's historical collection at the Historical Society, the Library of Congress, the Virginia Room at the Arlington County Library and archives at other repositories in the county, as well as state and federal archives, were reviewed.

Arlington County Planning staff was consulted regarding any newly proposed development projects that may affect the future of the survey areas' historic resources. Documents, including the local comprehensive plan, Virginia Department of Transportation Six-Year Plan, and public utility plans, were reviewed.

In preparation for field work, the reviewed materials, maps and previous survey route were studied to determine the best approach for covering as much of the survey area as possible. As occurred in Phase I, known properties were selected based on the Survey Criteria as stated in the RFP Section III. STATEMENT OF NEED; C. SURVEY CRITERIA. This information was discussed and the potential course of action prepared for the County staff's review and approval. The survey design was revised and up-dated as necessary during the course of the on-site and archival efforts.

During this phase, a public meeting was held to explain the Phase II survey effort to interested Arlington County officials, members of local historical associations, residents and owners. A general presentation introduced the survey team, explained the survey effort and its history, addressed County and DHR preservation goals, and presented the survey design. Attendees were asked to provide information that might aid the effort. The presentation included slides that illustrated the accomplishments of the Phase I survey effort and discussed the anticipation for Phase II activities, the DHR survey process, and the survey's potential for protecting Arlington County's historic architectural resources.

TASK 3: SURVEY

Upon completion of a survey schedule, the surveyors began the on-site survey work, following assigned routes. All work followed DHR standards and properties selected during the on-site survey met the published Survey Criteria. Selected properties were documented to the reconnaissance level as appropriate, including site plans and photographs of the exterior and interior where appropriate (and possible). Color slides were taken as appropriate throughout the survey effort. The photographs taken on-site were developed as the survey progressed. As the 3-1/2" by 5" black and white photographs were processed, labeling in pencil was conducted. Negative envelopes, negatives and color slides were also labeled to DHR standards. For those properties which were fifty years or older, but not selected for survey, map coding was conducted. All information collected during this task was filed into property file folders.

Concurrent with the on-site survey, archival sources were researched at the local, state and federal level, including primary and secondary sources. The bibliography developed in Phase I was expanded to include the additional sources. As information was gathered, it was synthesized with individual property survey files.

TASK 4: IPS

Information collected and recorded during the on-site field survey was entered into the Virginia Department of Historic Resources-Integrated Preservation Software database (VDHR-IPS). Data on each property surveyed was recorded as a single IPS record, as required by the VDHR survey program. At appropriate intervals throughout the project, each IPS property record was reviewed for accuracy and consistency. Upon review of the database and following corrections, frequency reports and tabular reports were generated. These reports provided organized data for analysis and incorporation into the Architectural Survey Report.

Various computer reports were generated for this project including:

- Arlington County Survey: Inventory of All Properties by VDHR ID Number
- Arlington County Survey: Inventory of All Properties by Name
- Arlington County Survey: Date of Primary Resource with Style
- Arlington County Survey: Wuzit of Primary Resource VDHR ID Number
- Arlington County Survey: Thematic Report by VDHR ID Number

VDHR-IPS was an important component of the survey, and will be a useful planning tool for Arlington County. The information in the database can be updated as needed and used to generate a variety of reports beyond those prepared for this study.

TASK 5: EVALUATION OF PROPERTIES

Reports generated by IPS were analyzed and properties considered potentially eligible as individual landmarks and as historic districts for listing on the National Register were evaluated within the context of the survey database, historic themes and historic context.

TASK 6: ARCHITECTURAL SURVEY REPORT

On-site and archival findings were assembled and synthesized in preparation for review prior to drafting the final report. One set of VDHR survey file envelopes were labeled for VDHR; one set of manila file folders for the County. The appropriate documentation, labeled photographs and negatives, and site plans were placed in the appropriate envelope or file. USGS Quadrangle Maps and County Base Maps were marked to indicate the surveyed properties for both VDHR and the county. All envelopes/files were checked for completion.

The Architectural Survey Report was prepared in conformance with the VDHR Guidelines for survey reports. Historic properties associated with the relevant themes were discussed in the historic context narratives. Illustrations, including photographs, drawings, maps, tables, charts, and other graphics were prepared. The draft document was distributed to the County and VDHR.

TASK 7: PROJECT COMPLETION

All required products were prepared for the County and VDHR. Two copies of the survey data and reports were exported for import into VDHR's master database. Two diskettes containing Arlington County survey data were prepared for submission. Two diskettes holding a copy of the text of the Architectural Survey Report in Word Perfect 6.0 were prepared. Two original unbound and ten (10) bound copies of the Architectural Survey Report were prepared. Two sets of hard-copy survey forms, photographs, maps, and other materials were made ready for submission. One set of negatives was prepared for VDHR. All products were submitted to the appropriate body.

At the completion of the survey, a final presentation was made to a selected official body in the County. This presentation summarized the findings and responded to questions and issues. In addition, a presentation was made to the VDHR National Register Evaluation Team focusing on those properties or districts deemed potentially eligible for the National Register.

Expected Results

As presented in VDHR's Request for Proposal (RFP) and defined in the contract, it was expected that 1000 properties would be surveyed to the Reconnaissance Level. In addition to the Reconnaissance Level Survey, a windshield survey was to be conducted for potential historic districts and appropriate recommendations made to VDHR and Arlington County. The boundaries for the potential historic district located on South Arlington Ridge Road, as defined in Phase I, are expected to be enlarged.

Through the implementation of the survey design, it was anticipated that the survey would provide a comprehensive sampling of architecture and other resources related to the eighteen historic themes established by VDHR. Given the heavy concentration of residential buildings in Arlington County, it was anticipated that the Domestic theme would be the best represented; in addition, it was anticipated that the detached single-family dwelling would be the most prevalent type to be surveyed.

SURVEY FINDINGS

ARLINGTON COUNTY DATABASE HOLDINGS

The survey and documentation of properties in Arlington County was completed to the approved standards of the Virginia Department of Historic Resources. The results of the project survey are as follows:

One Thousand, fifteen (1015) properties were recorded to the Reconnaissance Level. Each Reconnaissance Level Survey Form recorded a single property, including primary and secondary resources.

- One Thousand, fifteen (1015) properties were evaluated as Historic and fully surveyed to the Reconnaissance Level. Each form provides a detailed physical description of the primary resource as well as a brief description of the secondary resources on the property. It includes a brief evaluation of the property, placing it in its local historical and architectural context. Each form is accompanied by labeled, black-and-white photographs that adequately document the property's resources. Adequate photographic documentation includes several views of the primary resource and a minimum of one photograph per historic secondary resource or group of secondary resources if they are located close together. Photographs illustrate the architectural character of the resource, with at least one photograph taken at close range. A simple site plan sketch of the property indicating the relationship between primary and secondary resources is included for each surveyed property. The site plan sketch indicates the main road and any significant natural features such as creeks and rivers. A copy of the relevant section of the county base map is filed with each form.

SUMMARY AND ANALYSIS OF SURVEY FINDINGS

Summary

The VDHR-Integrated Preservation Software System (VDHR-IPS) is a computer system developed by the National Park Service and customized to meet VDHR's computer needs and desires. VDHR-IPS contains an individual database for Arlington County, created as part of the Phase I Architectural Survey project. Under Phase II, the database contains a total of 1015 records, all of which were determined to be historic. Together with the historic properties identified during the Phase I Survey of Arlington County, the master database contains approximately 1776 resources.

Analysis of Survey Findings

Statistical information was derived from the survey findings by producing computer-generated reports. These reports are designed to yield specific kinds of information for the appropriate analysis of survey findings. Some of the information entered into the database is factual, being based upon quantitative analysis; other information is valuative, and is based upon Tracerics' understanding and evaluation of architectural and historical data collected during the survey. The computer-generated reports represent both factual and valuative assessments, and provide statistics on important trends and aspects of the built environment of Arlington County.

The following analysis was prepared by architectural historians at Tracerics and is based upon a professional understanding of the historic properties and resources surveyed, taking into consideration the needs and requirements of Arlington County and VDHR.

- Identification of Properties

Each record in the computer represents a property, that is a location defined by a perimeter measurement, such as a lot or parcel of land or a determined environmental setting. One thousand and fifteen properties were identified and surveyed during the course of this project. These properties were identified in two ways: first, by using the 1936 Sanborn Fire Insurance Map of Arlington County and the 1943 Franklin Survey of Arlington County which indicates the site of resources (i.e. the footprint of a building or structure); second, through visual identification of primary resources that were not indicated on the historic maps but appeared to hold architectural significance associated with the recent past.

- Categorization of Properties

Each property record is initiated with the determination of a property category for the property as an entity. This categorization reflects the type of resource that is considered to be the primary resource and the source of the property's historicity. The four property categories are as follows: building, structure, site, and object. The definitions used are included in National Register Bulletin 15: How to Apply the National Register Criteria for Evaluation as follows:

- Building: A building, such as a house, barn, church, hotel, or similar construction, is created to shelter any form of human activity. "Building" may also refer to an historically, functionally related unit, such as a courthouse and jail or a house and barn.
- District A district possesses a significant concentration, linkage, or continuity of sites, buildings, structures, or objects united historically or aesthetically by plan or physical development.
- Site A site is the location of a significant event, a prehistoric or historic occupation or activity, or a building or structure, whether standing, ruined, or vanished, when the location itself possesses historic, cultural, or archeological value regardless of the value of any existing structure.
- Structure The term "structure" is used to distinguish from buildings those functional constructions made usually for purposes other than creating human shelter.
- Object The term "object" is used to distinguish between buildings and structures those constructions that are primarily artistic in nature or are relatively small in scale and simply constructed. Although it may be, by nature and design, movable, it is associated with a specific setting or environment, such as statuary in a designed landscape.

In Virginia, it is anticipated that a property will include at least one resource, usually considered its primary resource. The historic character of that resource is usually the basis upon which the determination of the property's overall historic or non-historic status is made.

The proper categorization of a property is dependent on the proper identification of the primary resource. For example, a property that includes a large residence built in the 1870s and several outbuildings from the same period would be categorized as a "BUILDING." Another property that includes a large residence built in 1995 near the foundation of an 18th century farmhouse would gain its historic status from the archeological potential of the site that is composed of the foundation and its environs, not from the no longer extant original building nor from the new house, therefore this property would be categorized a "SITE."

- Determination of Historic Status

The identification of properties and their categorization was followed by the determination of a historic status for the property. For this survey, historic was defined as possessing the capacity to convey reliable historic information about the physical and cultural development of Arlington County. It was not interpreted as a measure of the level of significance of that information.

Properties were considered HISTORIC if:

- the primary resource was fifty years of age or more; or
- the resource possessed the capacity to convey reliable historic information about the physical and cultural development of Arlington County.

Properties were determined to be NON-HISTORIC if:

- the primary resource was less than fifty years of age;
- no primary resource was visually evident; or
- the primary resource was altered to a level that any historic integrity it might have possessed was significantly destroyed or obscured.

• Identification and Count of Resource Sub-Types [WUZITS]

For each property surveyed in Arlington County, a complete list of the resources associated with the property was compiled. In each case, the primary resource was surveyed and documented; the other historic resources were counted and recorded in a counter field and then described in a secondary resources notes field. Each property count not only includes a count of the resources by general type, but a determination and count of the specific resource sub-type. These resource sub-types, classified as "wuzits" in the database, refer to the original purpose for which the resource was constructed and range from single-family dwellings to corn cribs to cemeteries. For the 1015 properties surveyed, thirty "wuzits" were identified. A complete list in alphabetical order of the type of "WUZITS" identified and the number of each wuzit counted in the course of this survey was compiled.

These lists reveal that thirty different resource sub-types were identified for the 1015 properties recorded in the database. It also reveals, however, that despite the variety of resource sub-types, the most heavily represented resource sub-type, by far, was the single-family dwelling. Ninety-seven percent of the total number of primary resources surveyed were single-family residences. This statistic is not surprising given that Arlington County emerged in the late 19th and early 20th centuries and continues today as an important residential suburb of Washington, DC

- Primary Resources

For the 1015 properties included in the database, only thirteen different primary resource types were identified throughout the survey area. The following report identifies the number of each identified resource type of the property's primary resource:

- VDHR Historic Themes and Period Contexts

VDHR has defined eighteen cultural themes for Virginia's material culture history from prehistoric times to the present. Although a surveyed property may relate to one or more of the defined themes, only the most relevant themes are indicated in the database. The following list shows the number of historic properties within the current boundaries of Arlington County that are primarily associated with each of the fourteen historic context themes identified in the survey.

Conclusion

The information gleaned from computer-generated reports and presented here is only a small sampling of the type of analysis that can be done using VDHR-IPS. At this stage, all of the survey information has been entered into the database and is available for retrieval and analysis as necessary. The findings listed in this report are generally summary findings; the information can be further analyzed by looking at the actual computer-generated reports and customizing them to meet specific needs and requests.

SURVEY RECOMMENDATIONS

A. Recommendations for Further Study

- Phase III Architectural Survey

These first two phases of the project completely surveyed Neighborhood Service Areas G and H, as well as the selected Target Areas. Neighborhood Service Area H was comprehensively surveyed to include resources erected prior to 1942, while Neighborhood Service Area G was comprehensively surveyed to include resources erected prior to 1936. Portions of Neighborhood Service Area F included in the 1936 comprehensive survey are Glen Carlyn and the northwestern section of Barcroft. The Target Areas -- Arna Valley and Columbia Heights West -- were documented to the 1942 date of construction, as indicated by historic maps.

The Nauck Target Area, which was surveyed to the 1936 date of construction, should be comprehensively documented to the 1942 Franklin Survey Map. Additionally, those areas within Neighborhood Service Area F and G that were surveyed to the 1936 date should be further examined to insure the proper documentation of resources constructed between 1936 and 1947. Further survey and documentation should be comprehensively conducted in the Neighborhood Service Area F, beginning in the community of Barcroft. Funding and the tremendous building stock dating from the early part of the 20th century may warrant an initial survey date of 1936 to insure the completion of a comprehensive survey in southern Arlington County.

A comprehensive survey strategy should be devised for the Fairlington neighborhood. The vast number of resources within Fairlington, a confined community laid out and designed by a developer, exhibit the identical form, plan, and style. A comprehensive survey of the resources within this district would not be efficient. The Fairlington survey methodology should ensure the recordation of all resources in the community, while not squandering the surveys of the county and state. It should be noted that a Preliminary Information Form (PIF) has been compiled by residents of the community and submitted to the county for review.

• Properties to be Surveyed at the Intensive Level

B. Evaluation/Recommendations for Designation

- Standards for Evaluation

The properties identified in Phase II Architectural Survey of Arlington County have been evaluated on a preliminary basis for their historic significance at the local, state and national levels. As stated in the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Evaluation, evaluation is the process of determining whether identified properties meet defined criteria of significance and whether they should, therefore, be included in an inventory of historic properties determined to meet the established criteria.

In association with the Secretary of the Interior's Standards for Evaluation is the Secretary of the Interior's Guidelines for Evaluation. These guidelines describe the principles and process for evaluating the significance of the identified historic properties. In evaluating the historic resources of Arlington County, both the Standards and Guidelines for Evaluation were consulted. As a first step, the guidelines suggest that criteria used to develop an inventory of historic properties should be coordinated with the National Register of Historic Places. In the case of Arlington County, the evaluation process was conducted using the National Register of Historic Places criteria and the Virginia Landmarks Register criteria. The National Register of Historic Places is the official national list of recognized properties, which is maintained and expanded by the National Park Service on behalf of the Secretary of the Interior. The Virginia Landmarks Register criteria, established in 1966, are coordinated with those established for the National Register.

The National Register of Historic Places Criteria states:

The quality of significance in American history, architecture, archeology, and culture is present in districts, sites, buildings, and objects that possess integrity of location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association, and:

- A. that are associated with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history; or
- B. that are associated with the lives of persons significant in our past; or
- C. that embodies the distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction or that represents the work of a master, or that possesses high artistic values, or that represents a significant and distinguishable entity whose components may lack individual distinction; or
- D. that have yielded, or may be likely to yield, information important in prehistory or history.

Similarly, the Virginia Landmarks Register criteria are set forth in the legislation as follows:

No structure or site shall be deemed a historic one unless it has been prominently identified with, or best represents, some major aspect of the cultural, political, economic, military, or social history of the State or nation, or has had a relationship with the life of an historic personage or event representing some major aspect of, or ideals related to, the history of the State or nation. In the case of structures which are to be so designated, they shall embody the principal or unique features of an architectural style or demonstrate the style of a period of our history or method of construction, or serve as an illustration of the work of a master builder, designer or architect whose genius influenced the period in which he worked or has significance in current times. In order for a site to qualify as an archaeological site, it shall be an area from which it is reasonable to expect that artifacts, materials, and other specimens may be found which give insight to an understanding of aboriginal man or the Colonial and early history and architecture of the State or nation.

A second consideration cited by the guidelines suggests that the established criteria should be applied within particular historic contexts. In the case of Arlington County, the criteria were examined to determine how they might apply to properties within the given context. The historic contexts are synonymous with the eighteen historic themes developed by the VDHR and listed as follows:

Domestic Theme: This theme relates broadly to the human need for shelter, a home place, and community dwellings.

Subsistence/Agriculture Theme: This theme most broadly seeks explanations of the different strategies that cultures develop to procure, process and store food.

Government/Law/Political Theme: This theme relates primarily to the enactment and administration of laws by which a nation, state, or other political jurisdiction is governed; and activities related to politics and government.

Health Care/Medicine Theme: This theme refers to the care of sick, elderly and the disabled, and the promotion of health and hygiene.

Education Theme: This theme relates to the process of conveying or acquiring knowledge or skills through systematic instruction, training, or study, whether through public or private efforts.

Military/Defense Theme: This theme relates to the system of defending the territory and sovereignty of a people and encompasses all military activities, battles, strategic locations, and events important in military history.

Religion Theme: This theme concerns the organized system of beliefs, practices, and traditions regarding the world view of various cultures and the material manifestation of spiritual beliefs.

Social Theme: This theme relates to social activities and institutions, the activities of charitable, fraternal, or other community organizations and places associated with broad social movements.

Recreation and the Arts Theme: This theme relates to the arts and cultural activities and institutions related to leisure time and recreation.

Transportation/Communication Theme: This theme relates to the process and technology of conveying passengers, materials, and information.

Commerce/Trade Theme: This theme relates to the process of trading goods, services and commodities.

Industry/Processing/Extraction Theme: This theme explores the technology and process of managing materials, labor and equipment to produce goods and services.

Landscape Theme: This theme explores the historic, cultural, scenic, visual and design qualities of cultural landscapes, emphasizing the reciprocal relationships affecting the natural and the human-built environment.

Funerary Theme: This theme concerns the investigation of grave sites for demographic data to study population, composition, health and mortality within prehistoric and historic societies.

Ethnicity/Immigration Theme: This theme explores the material manifestations of ethnic diversity and the movement and interaction of people of different ethnic heritages through time and space in Virginia.

Settlement Patterns Theme: Studies related to this theme involve the analysis of different strategies available for the utilization of an area in response to subsistence, demographic, socio-political, and religious aspects of a cultural system.

Architecture/Landscape Architecture/Community Planning Theme: This theme explores the design values and practical arts of planning, designing, arranging, constructing and developing buildings, structures, landscapes, towns and cities for human use and enjoyment.

Technology/Engineering Theme: While the technological aspects of a culture form the primary basis of interpretation of all themes, this theme relates primarily to the utilization of and evolutionary changes in material culture as a society adapts to the physical, biological, and cultural environment.

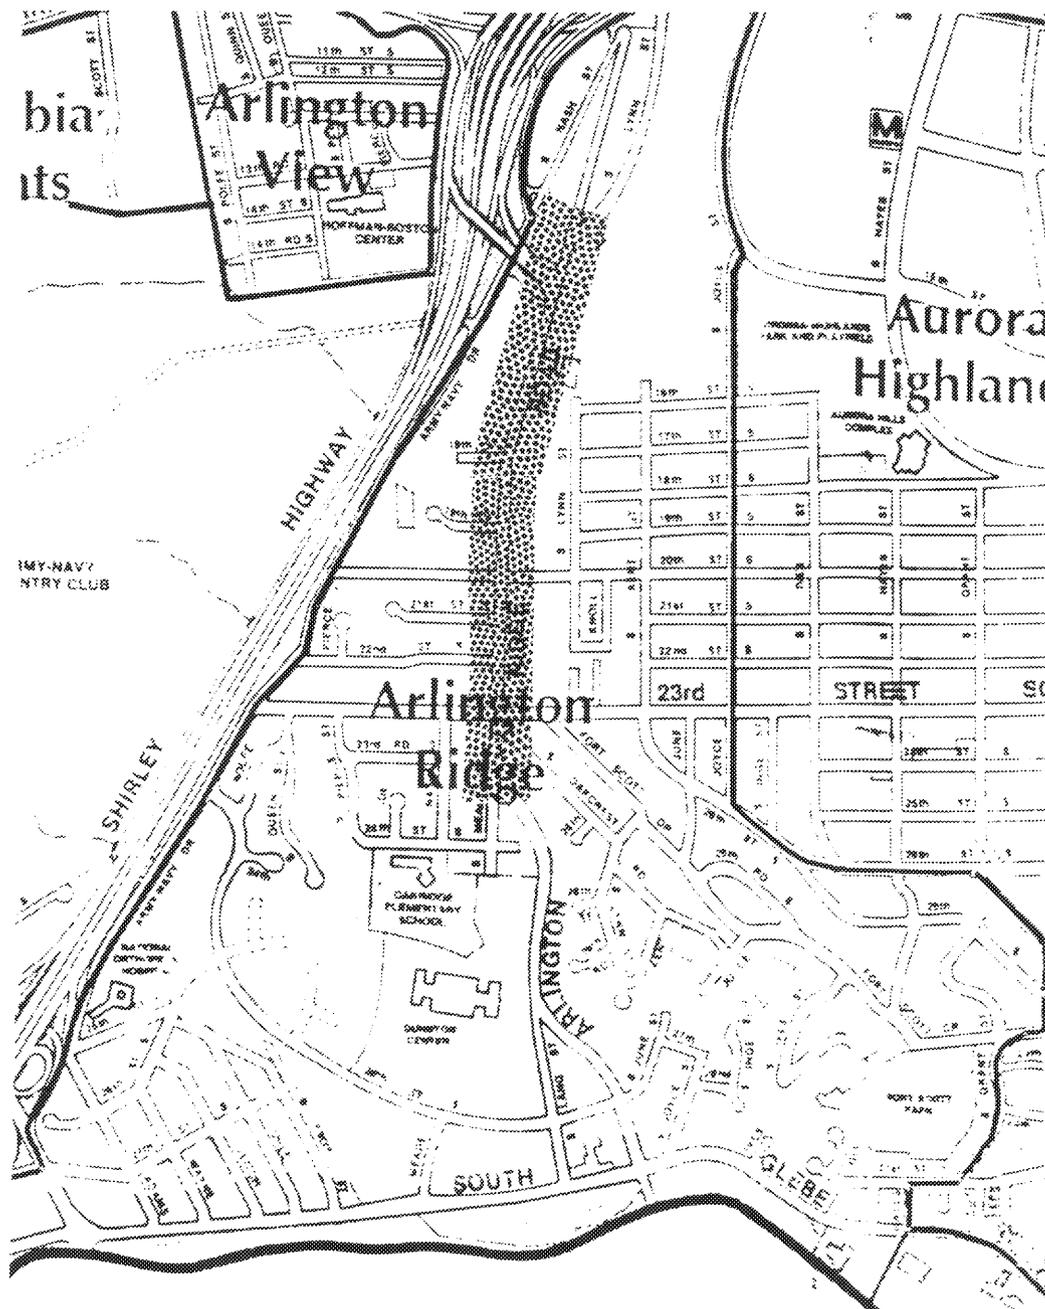

After determining how the criteria applies, the Secretary of Interior's Guidelines for Evaluation suggests that the integrity of a property should be assessed. In evaluating the integrity, factors such as structural problems, deterioration, and abandonment should be considered if they have affected the significance of the property. In surveying the properties of Arlington County, the integrity of the resource was evaluated using the seven aspects as defined in National Register Bulletin 15: How to Apply the National Register Criteria for Evaluation. The aspects include location, design, setting, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association. The seventh aspect, association, was not always evaluated while conducting on-site survey work, and often requires further archival research.

Based upon the state and national guidelines and criteria, all of the properties in Arlington County were evaluated for potential nomination to the National Register of Historic Places and Virginia Landmarks Register.

- Recommendations for Designation to the National Register of Historic Places:

Arlington Ridge

First identified in the Phase I Architectural Survey of Arlington County, a potential historic district was surveyed which should be further researched, documented, and intensively surveyed. This potential district is located along South Arlington Ridge Road, bounded by Lynn and Meade streets. As documented by the reconnaissance survey, the area contains three circa 1920s buildings that served as real estate developers' offices that were designed in the popular architectural styles of the period. The modest buildings, two of which continue to function as real estate offices, are strategically sited along this major transportation corridor to attract passing motorists. Additionally, the neighborhood along South Arlington Ridge Road developed originally as a summer retreat for Washingtonians seeking refuge from the sweltering heat of the nation's capital in the 1910s and 1920s. These cottages have been enlarged and modified to reflect contemporary architectural styles, such as Colonial Revival, Bungalow/Craftsman, and Georgian Revival. Predominately, the buildings are set back from the street with large yards on the highest ridge in this part of the county. The freestanding dwellings along Meade Street were all erected simultaneously for high-ranking military personnel. The architectural style and scale, landscaped yards, and neighborhood context jointly provide this area with elements necessary for potential listing on the National Register of Historic Places as a district. The focal point of the potential district is the Hume School (000-0011), that has previously been listed on the Virginia Landmarks Register and National Register of Historic Places.

STUDY AREA FOR THE POTENTIAL HISTORIC DISTRICT OF
SOUTH ARLINGTON RIDGE ROAD

Glen Carlyn

A third potential historic district has been identified in the Glen Carlyn community of Neighborhood Service Area F. Bounded to the east by Glencarlyn Park, Glen Carlyn is one of the earliest neighborhoods in the survey area. Settled in the mid-18th century by the Ball family, the area was owned by William Carlin in 1766. During the 19th century, John Carlin popularized two springs located on his property as a resort for city dwellers from the District of Columbia and Alexandria. More than 100 years later, in 1887, former Missouri Congressman Samuel S. Burdett and William W. Curtis purchased 132 acres of what had been the Ball-Carlin estate. A year later, Burdett established the Carlin Springs Cooperative Association, known as one of the first planned cooperative residential communities in the country. The street system in Glen Carlyn follows a grid aligned with the points of the compass. A public square of sorts was created by the parcel bounded by S. 3rd and S. 4th streets, and Kensington and Lexington streets. Within this block are the public library, Carlin Hall (000-39), and the Ball-Sellers Family Cemetery (000-537).

As may be expected with the early settlement in the area, Glen Carlyn claims a number of historically and architecturally significant buildings. Two of the most significant buildings, the Ball-Sellers House (000-9) and Carlin Hall (000-39), have been listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Surveyed properties in the community from the late 1800s include the Backus House (000-78), General Burdett's House (000-510), and East Lawn (000-534). Glen Carlyn contains one of Arlington County's greatest concentrations of late-19th-century Queen Anne-style architecture. More recent resources in the survey were constructed in the first half of the 20th century and are modest in ornamentation and plan. Styles and forms include Bungalow/Craftsman, Tudor Revival, and Colonial Revival.
